Vindication Of Nixon Predicted

GEN. HAIG . . . Nixon's chief of staff.

Washington (AP) - President Nixon's chief lawyer indicated Sunday he believes the House impeachment inquiry hinges on whether the President approved hush money payments to Watergate defendants.

And the presidential tape transcripts released last week, said attorney James St. Clair, prove that Nixon "neither authorized . . . nor knew" about such a payment.

Both St. Clair and White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig Jr., appearing separately on televised interview programs, predicted that Nixon would be vindicated in the Haig said the edited transcripts were published "warts and all" by the President "to convince the American people for the first time that he had nothing to hide.

St. Clair insisted that "the tapes make it clear" that Nixon rejected, in a March 21, 1973, conversation with John W. Dean III, the demands for money from Watergate conspirator E.

Yet, there are several apparent contradictions on that issue in a reading of that transcript.

When Dean tells Nixon that such demands may eventually total $1 million, Nixon replies: "We could get that. On the money, if you need the money you could get that.'

Moments later, the President says:

"But in the end, we are going to be bled to death . . . and in effect look like a cover-up. So that we can't do."

Later yet, the topic turns to a specific demand from Hunt for $120,-000. Nixon: "Would you agree that that's the prime thing that you damn well better get that done?'

A month later, on April 17, Nixon and H.R. (Bob) Haldeman are trying to recall the March 21 discussion. Nixon says: "I didn't tell him to go get the money, did I?" Haldeman responds: "No."

St. Clair, who appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press," said that in releasing the transcripts, Nixon felt he had given the House Judiciary Committee "everything he thinks they Asked why Nixon would not leave it up to the committee to decide that, St. Clair said only that "I hope and believe they . . . come to the conclusion that this is the full story of Watergate.'

St. Clair will represent the President in proceedings expected to begin this week in the panel's impeachment inquiry. He has been granted the right to question witnesses, but not crossexamine them.

Cross-examination — in which leading questions may be asked — "is the only way to fully determine what the truth is," he said.

Haig, who appeared on ABC's

"Issues and Answers," would not reply directly to questions about whether the White House would also turn over evidence sought on such issues not directly connected with Watergate as the milk fund and ITT cases. He complained that after the "massive turnover" of the transcripts "we now are in a public debate about what more should be turned over.'

"The time has come to sit down and assess," he said.

20% Of City Gas Bought At Retail

By LYNN ZERSCHLING Star Staff Writer

The city is paying from $500 to $3,000 a month for over-thecounter gasoline purchases to keep city cars on the streets. The city has been forced to compete for gasoline on the open market to meet about 20% of its requirements, Gary Kitt, assistant purchasing agent, said in an interview.

Lincoln is receiving 80% of its gasoline allotment from Standard Oil Co., Kitt said.

And that reduction has resulted in a cutback in service housing administration, Project by some city departments, including the park department and the paving and repair divisions.

Kitt noted that the Federal Energy Office requires emergency systems, such as the police and fire departments, to be fueled 100% of their requirements.

And that presents a problem down at the city garage, where much of the gas is pumped out to city vehicles.

The garage is receiving an average of 23,000 gallons a month, Kitt said. Police cruisers eat up almost 20,000 of those gallons, leaving a spare 3,000 gallons a month to be split by other departments.

Those departments include engineering, traffic engineering, health department, air pollution, on Aging, Municipal Court and the mayor's car.

require around 6,000 gallons a

regularly buy their gas from filling stations.

With the cutback in gasoline received from Standard Oil, Kitt said the city receives an average of 52,000 gallons a month, while the Lincoln Electric System (LES) is receiving 9,000. Actually, the city needs from 65,000 to 70,000 gallons of gas and LES requires 12,000 gallons a month.

The 80% allotment from Standard Oil is guaranteed, Kitt explained, while outside purchases are not.

"It just depends on who has some extra supplies," he said. In addition to battling the gasoline squeeze, the city has been hit with skyrocketing fuel prices.

From Oct. 1, 1973, to April 1, 1974, the price of both premium and regular gas has risen by

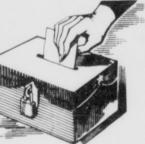

Last fall the city bought premium for 23.48¢ a gallon and regular for 21.48¢, Kitt reported. This spring premium costs 40.56¢ and regular 37.56¢ a gallon. The outside purchases average from three to five cents more a gallon.

Although the amount of gasoline available to the city on a month by month basis is not known, one thing is - more gas eaters are on the way.

By the end of May, 10 new minibuses are scheduled to roll into Lincoln for the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) All consume gasoline.

'There's no way to tell' what effect the new minis will have on the city's gasoline dilemma, Kitt said. The LTS Board still is working out plans for the minibuses' use in Lincoln.

Brandt's Party Still Holds On

Germany (AP) - Chancellor Willy Brandt's Social Democrats held their ground Sunday in the Saarland state elections, though the opposition Christian Democrats scored big gains against other minor parties.

Friedel Laeppel, the Social Democrat state chairman, said the vote showed the party was recovering strength in the wake of defeats in Hamburg. Schleswig-Holstein and Rhineland-Palatinate. After those elections a spy scandal hit Brandt's government and was expected to shake public confidence in his policy of friendship with the Eastern European bloc.

With more than half the votes counted in the elections to the regional council, the Christian Democrats had 51.7 per cent of the vote, up from 39.8 per cent in 1968's final returns. The Social Democrats had 37.1 per cent against 37.4 per cent in 1968.

Job-Hunting Season At Peak Right Now

By LIANE GUENTHER Star Staff Writer

If you are unemployed and looking for work, statistics indicate this is one of the best times of the year to find a job.

Gene Landkamer, manager of the Lincoln office of the State Employment Service, said the biggest shortages of people to place on jobs come in April and early

This is just a segment of the annual unemployment cycle. Each year it follows the same, basic path, fluctuating slightly with drastic changes in the weather or the overall economy.

Depending on weather conditions, unemployment is generally highest during January, February and March, Landkamer said. Certain industries, such as construction, road paving and street repair, almost close up shop completely during the winter months, he said.

If weather conditions in April and May are favorable for construction and outside work, the demand for laborers frequently exceeds the supply, he said. Hence, the sharp drop in unemployment for those two months.

Then in June, unemployment figures generally bounce back up, he said. Students and teachers flood the job market looking for summer jobs and recent graduates seek permanent employ-

The unemployment curve starts back down in July and August, he said, as most summer job seekers have either found work or quit pounding the pavement.

In September and October, unemployment hits another low after students are back in school. Landkamer said there is usually a "crucial shortage" in September for construction, restaurant, hotel and motel employes.

As the Christmas holidays approach, the demand for workers in retail industries steadily grows, he said. Then comes the "slight rise" in unemployment after New Years, which is caused by a drop in retail trade.

Despite scattered reports of an economic slowdown or even worse, a recession, Landkamer indicated the employment outlook for Lincoln is quite

He said that even the oft-mentioned recession would have little effect on Lincoln's economy "unless people stopped retail spending.

"Lincoln's industries are healthy and generally independent of the national economy," he said. "This is one reason why unemployment here is lower than the national figures," he said.

Landkamer pointed out that state government and education are big employers in Lincoln and that "neither one would be seriously affected by a recession.

He also noted that most local industry is related to agriculture and not many manufacturers were involved in either the war or space efforts.

'The types of things that are manufactured here are demand items," he said, 'and would be in demand whether there is a recession or not.

Landkamer also noted that reponse to the announcement that Kawasaki will build a new plant here has been "very

"It isn't necessarily so" that "a lot of unemployment is needed to attract industry," he said.

by the safeties are riding bikes on school property, crossing the street in other than the three designated spots and not obeying the safety on duty.

But the school-age youngsters are not the only targets under the watchful eye of the safeties.

Fifth-grader Kyle Baker complained that he has more trouble with the grownups than he does with the kids.

"Matter of fact," he admitted, "it's really hard to get up enough courage to tell adults where to cross. So Kyle came up with an alternate plan. He proposed planting flowers in the path of a short-cut, forcing the neglectful to walk around to the crosswalk. "I don't think even adults will step on flowers," he reasoned. In addition to its on-duty chores, this active crew of fifth and sixth-grade safeties makes the rounds of the classrooms sharing safety tips with schoolmates, especially the younger ones. They've also sponsored a bicycle safety training program and drawn up plans for practice tornado drills.

Fifth grade teacher Dick Treadway, supervisor of the safety patrol, plans several work and play parties each year as reward for his dedicated crew.

"We always get a couple of instant safeties before these parties," joked one of the regulars.

With official tallies covering all but a handful of the returns, Mitterrand had 10,935,763, or 43.36 per cent of the balloting; Giscard d'Estaing, candidate of the Independent Republican party, had 8,286,382 votes, or 32.85 per cent, and Gaullist candidate Jacques Chaban-Delmas won 3,693,168 votes, or

The rest of the votes were divided among nine other candidates in a heavy turnout of France's more than 30.5 million voters who cast ballots under cloudy skies and scattered showers.

To win in the first balloting, one of the presidential hopefuls would have needed more than 50 per cent of the vote.

Mitterrand and Giscard d'Estaing said they were confident of victory. The finance minister was promised support by Premier Pierre Messmer and other Gaullist chieftains, although Chaban-Delmas refused to say whether he would support Giscard d'Estaing.

Communist boss Georges Marchais, whose party is officially backing Mitterrand, urged more support for the Socialist leader. The marshalling of forces behind both candidates is likely to make the final outcome very close, analyists said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two Democratic and Republican members of the House Judiciary Committee said Sunday the committee's party line vote on the Watergate transcripts should not be interpreted as a sign of a partisan split on the impeachment issue.

After receiving edited transcripts from the White House instead of the actual tape recordings, the committee voted 20 to 18 to inform President Nixon he had not complied with its subpoena.

"Few if any really thought he was in full compliance," Rep. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., said. "The difference in opinion was in the proper response.

Sarbanes said the members had agreed unanimously on the rules that will govern the committee's evidentiary hearings.

Railsback said he voted against sending Nixon the simply stated noncompliance letter because he favored a proposal to continue efforts to reach a mutually satisfactory compromise.

Both congressmen said the transcripts were a first step but not adequate by themselves for the impeachment investigation. Railsback said he would prefer that committee counsels be included in Nixon's offer to let the committee chairman and ranking minority member hear the tapes to compare them with the transcripts

However, both said they would like to hear the tapes for themselves.

"A sentence can have a very different meaning depending on how it is said," Sarbanes said. Railsback said, "The edited tapes will permit us to better grasp the actual conversations. I hope the President will relent and let us see the edited tapes.

Vietnam Troop Buildup Violation Of Cease-Fire

The New York Eimes

By LESLIE H. GELB

Washington - The North and South Vietnamese continue to build up their military forces in violation of the 1973 cease-fire agreement, but the American intelligence community still sees military stalemate ahead — at least for another

Several officials said that intelligence estimates showed that Saigon's forces had a big lead as of January, 1973, and are improving, but that Hanoi's forces are improving faster and closing

American officials believe that Siagon's real problem for the next year is not the likelihood of a major Communist offensive, but inflation. Running at the 1973 rate of about 80%, inflation could create serious morale problems and undermine political support for the Thieu government.

These nonmilitary factors are seen by the intelligence community, the officials said, as central to the outcome of renewed large-scale

In the meantime, military sources and other officials said the key military issue was which side could bring more combat forces and firepower to bear on particular battles.

Troop Count

The latest intelligence report lists Communist combat forces in South Vietnam at about 180,000, including 30,000 to 40,000 Viet Cong. In addition, there are about 80,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in Cambodia and about 90,000 in Laos, as well as 50,000 in reserve in North Viet-

They are opposed by about 360,000 South Vietnamese soldiers. This does not include the large number of South Vietnamese fighter aircraft and helicopters.

The South Vietnamese forces, the sources said, are spread throughout the country defending villages and highways to cities. The North Vietnamese forces, on the other hand, do not have much territory to defend and are free to concentrate their forces in specific places when they are ready to fight.

The sources said, however, Saigon forces

could still be rushed into battle with helicopters to maintain a superiority in numbers.

'Amazing' Road Program But Saigon's advantage in mobility is gradually being offset by what officials call "Hanoi's amazing road-building program." Begun before the cease-fire and now known as Corridor 613, Hanoi's new highway in South Vietnam is 500 miles long, running from the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam to 80 miles northwest of Saigon.

The corridor supplements the traditional infiltration route in Laos known as the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Unlike the trail, it is usable in all seasons. fully paved and mostly two-laned.

The significance of the corridor, the sources explained, is that Hanoi can now send soldiers, supplies, and arms to the southern reaches of South Vietnam in half the time of years past. Officials estimate that the trip now takes 30 days.

Moreover, these officials say, the corridor has about 500 miles of feeder roads, extending at strategic locations into the South Vietnamese countryside.

Corridor Well Defended

The corridor is defended, one military source said, by about double the number of antiaircraft guns that Hanoi had in South Vietnam before the cease-fire. This source also said that there was 'some evidence' of radar-guided artillery and the SA-7 missile used by the Arabs in the recent Middle East War

Along this new highway, the military source said, the North Vietnamese have rolled 400 new tanks to add to the 200 already in the south, and have doubled their artillery. Adjoining the highway, sources said, is a four-inch pipeline for

The officials also stressed the estimate of the intelligence community that Hanoi stockpiled in South Vietnam six months' to two years' worth of arms and ammunition, measured according to the level of fighting during 1972.

When the test does come, and most officials believe it will, the question boils down to which side's will and leadership will hold out longer.

More Than Just Firecrackers Said Likely To Be Off Market

Washington (UPI) — New government rules which will ban firecrackers nationwide could put other forms of fireworks off the market as well, according to federal safety officials.

The rules, to be published later this month by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, will be designed to make sure that fireworks do not go off too quickly, that their flight patterns are not erratic and that their materials are not too flimsy.

Those devices not conforming my not be sold. One officials said this could particularly affect bottle rockets — a sort of a skyrocket on a stick which is launched by placing the stick in the neck of a bottle. The sticks on such devices are now too weak to assure a straight flight pattern, he said, and they may effectively be banned as a

The commission originally had proposed a ban on both firecrackers and bottle rockets but last week's announcement said the outright ban. which will be in effect along with the safety rules by this Fourth of July, will apply only to firecrackers. Large size firecrackers, such as M-

80s and cherry bombs, already are banned. Another safety rule will probably involve fuse length to make sure devices don't go off too soon.

Some persons have been injured by cone tountains, for instance, when they showered sparks on them while they were still bent over the fuse.

The ban will have little economic impact on the people who make fireworks in the United States, since all firecrackers and most bottle rockets are imported. But it will cut into the importing business. Last year about $180 million worth of fireworks of all kinds were sold, with firecrackers and bottle rockets accounting for about 43% - or $70 million - of that total

The commission said it has received very little response from Fourth of July revelers so far, although the ban when originally announced as a proposal sparked petition drives from firecracker

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, however, does not think the commission went far enough

'They're deluding the public by taking off firecrackers and leaving on foman candles, fire fountains, fire cones and a host of other very dangerous items," said James F. O'Neil, director of industrial services for the society.

He also charged that the safety standards themselves were written with industry help.

Kansas City Star Is Picketed

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — A wildcat strike forced the Kansas City Star Sunday to quit experimenting and follow through with its plans to convert to a computerized operation. The Sunday edition, with a circulation of more than 400,000, was printed by supervisory personnel and employes from the news, business, circulation and advertising departments.

Using its year-old computer equipment, the newspaper published an eight-page news section that included local and national news, sports, stocks and Saturday's comic page.

Display advertising was eliminated from the first section.

The bulk of the newspaper was made up of regular Sunday features that had been compiled and printed before a dispute Friday night that resulted in the firing of 98 pressmen and 30

mailers. Members of Web Pressmen's Union Local No. 14 began picketing outside the Star building in downtown Kansas City early Saturday, and other unions in the building would not cross the picket

"The Star intends to continue daily production as a service to readers and advertisers," Paul Miner, president of the company, said in a frontpage story in Sunday's edition.

Frank S. McKinney, general manager of the Star, said the pressmen were fired when they stopped work to protest the transfer and subsequent dismissal of a fellow worker. The Mailers were fired when they refused to end a union meeting.

Next Week's Ballot: Amendments

The governmental experiment undertaken by Nebraskans almost 40 years ago has withstood the test of time and has proved itself. The unique one-house, nonpartisan legislature is about as uncomplicated, open, accountable and responsive a representative body as can be found anywhere in the 50 states.

And for helping to perpetuate that basically sound system through dedicated hard work, state senators are currently rewarded with part-time pay for what has become a full-time job.

It's about time that squeaky tight Nebraskans, who demand much of their representatives at the Capitol and all too frequently ignore the positive aspects of the system that serves them, begin to pay for what they get by approving Amendment No. 1 on the May 14 state ballot. The proposed amendment would provide state senators with a monthly salary not to exceed $675, compared to the present $400 per month. Even that proposed boost in pay amounts to inequitable compensation, but it is an attempt to rectify the situation.

Approving the pay proposal is simply a matter of people being fair with those they elect to represent them. It would make the time spent by senators away from job and family less expensive. I might also help to encourage able men and women who now feel they can't afford to do so to run for the Legislature. For these reasons, The Star recommends a "FOR" vote on Amendment No. 1.

Amendment No. 2 rounds out the mercifully short list of proposed constitutional revisions which Nebraska voters will consider this spring.

The proposed change would remove the lieutenant governor as presiding officer of the Legislature and thus his right to cast tie-breaking votes, and would provide that the members of the Unicameral choose their own presiding officer.

This complements a change approved by voters in 1972 which goes in effect with the coming election under which the governor and lieutenant governor candidates run as a team in the general election and under which the elected lieutenant governor is assigned administrative duties by the governor.

Amendment No. 2 would free the lieutenant governor from his legislative duties in order to tend to whatever administrative functions the governor assigns. It would, further, sharpen the distinction between the executive and legislative branches of state government and would help prevent partisan considerations from dominating the nonpartisan Unicameral in light of the fact that lieutenant governors from now on will be elected as members of partisan teams and as administrative partners.

Distressed, and hoping to get his tour For those reasons, and for consistency's sake, The Star recommends a "For"

NEW YORK - Speaking from the grave, as it were, Nikita Khrushchev has added his own judgment to the many being heaped on his old sparring mate, Richard Nixon. A swatch of of the late Soviet leader's memoirs, running in Time magazine before being published in book form, both clouts and praises Nixon. And rakes some treasured scribblings in a reporter's notebook.

BOB CONSIDINE

The famous "Kitchen Debate" was not confined to the model kitchen of that "typical American home" we built to impress the Russians at the American exhibition in Moscow's Sokolniki Park. The debate began at their first meeting (July 24, 1959) in Khrushchev's Kremlin office. Khrushchev won the first round. Echoes of the introductions had barely died away (I wrote at the time) when Khrushchev began to question the vice president sharply on a resolution passed in the U.S. Senate a day or two before. The resolution expressed sympathy for the "captive nations" behind the Iron Curtain. In the course of its passage, several senators from states where large numbers of refugees and others tracing their roots back into Eastern Europe lived and voted, attacked Khrushchev as an arch despot.

Khrushchev demanded to know whether this Senate resolution marked an official change in American foreign policy. Nixon attempted to explain that there is a difference between a resolution and a fact of policy. Then why, Khrushchev wanted to know, was it passed just at this time when Nixon was embarking on a good-will tour?

off on the best foot possible, Nixon said in Khrushchev Memoirs Touch Nixon Visit hands warmly and enthused, "Oh, yes, I met Mr. Mikoyan when he was in Washington. In the United States we have great respect for Mr. Mikoyan's ability as a trader. Everybody in our country recognizes Armenians as the greatest of traders." Through his interpreter, Khrushchev barked, "Then your country has forgotten how to trade. Mikoyan couldn't make a single deal while he was there." He stomped off.

* * *

"Maybe I shouldn't have gotten into that," Nixon whispered to Daly and me as we trudged in Khrushchev's footsteps. (How could any of us know that 13 years later the same Nixon would promote historic trade and other deals with Khrushchev's successor, Leonid Brezhnev?)

There wasn't a kitchen in sight when the "Kitchen Debate" began. The wrangle between the temporal tsar of all the Russias and the man from Whittier began in RCA's color-TV pavilion. The schedule called for Nixon to show it off to tion really didn't mean anything, despite Khrushchev as an American scientific the fervor of its language and the publicimarvel, make a brief video tape with him, and move on.

But Khrushchev noticed that the glassed-in gallery that looked down into the studio was crowded with attentive and admiring constituents. The prospect Nixon nodded and the tension disof appearing on a tape that would be seen appeared. They rode to the fair together on American TV also struck him as a livein Khrushchev's limousine. Clearly, it was then or never for Nixon. Suddenly he jabbed his right forefinger at his truculent guest. "Just a moment." he said, loudly. "You're trying to dominate this talk. You would've made a good lawyer. Don't give me vour ultimatums." (It was a picture which, reprinted by the millions, almost made Richard Nixon president of the United States in 1960. If it had, well, he would have been out of office years before his present travail.)

There were two other clashes that day, in the aforementioned kitchen and when Khrushchev attempted to interrupt Nixon's speech officially opening the U.S. exhibit. "Sit down!" Nixon commanded. "As we say in my country, I have the

In his taped memoirs, Khrushchev says his low regard for Nixon at that time was based on his belief that the vice president was a "McCarthyite." (He also said at that time, when reminded that Nixon might become president of the United States, "That would be like sending a rabbit to guard the cabbage patch.") But the current memoirs contain a poignant apology, too. During a business trip too Moscow in 1965 as a representative of Pepsi, Nixon asked to see Khrushchev, by then an unperson. His request was turned down by the new crowd. But Khrushchev heard about it and now, from wherever he is, speaks of Nixon's "genuine human courtesy," adding, "I am very sorry I didn't have an opportunity to thank him for his consideration, and to shake hands

'Control With Care'

The Lancaster County Weed Control Authority is not traditionally regarded as a launching pad for promising political careers. Nor is it thought of as a position from which power is arrogated or from which oppression flows.

Unless you happen to be a bindweed or a musk thistle.

It is a body of nominally-paid elected officials who supervise and appropriate money for the control of "noxious" weeds, and hardly a more mundane political job can be found.

Still, during a time when government at all levels is held suspect, might it not be appropriate for the winds of change to sweep the weed control authority?

Adopting the campaign slogans "Control With Care" and "if you can't beat 'em, eat 'em," Roger Welsch, University of Nebraska professor, folklorist and natural foods lover, is seeking one of two urban seats on the County Weed Control Authority. And thus far throughout a droll but also serious campaign, he's gotten good ink. Euell Gibbons, the man who eats pine

The Tyranny Of History

WASHINGTON — One of the perversities of history is that it refuses to adjust itself to the convenience of men or nations. It keeps asking the most critical questions at the most awkward times. It ought to know that President Nixon is preoccupied with the Watergate and that everywhere there is now political disruption and a longing for quiet to sort things out, but it will not wait for a new political order.

In fact, the next three years are likely to be decisive on four fundamental questions:

1. Whether there will be peace or war between the Soviet Union and China. 2. Whether the race in strategic arms — particularly multiple nuclear warheads on intercontinental missiles - will get beyond control. 3. Whether there will be a new order or war in the Middle east, threatening the very existence of the state of Israel. 4. Whether Europe will move forward toward political union and a tursting partnership with the United States, or fall back into nationalsim and encourage American isolationism.

Life, of course, has a way of going on regardless of the prophecies of calendar worshippers, but there is something very special about these coming three years. 公 公 公

The danger of war between Moscow and Peking is not a Sunday supplement nightmare. Nothing troubles Secretary of State Kissinger more than this question, and presumably he has more reasons than anybody else here for worrying about it.

But right now is the dangerous time - not three years from now. By then China will have an offensive nuclear arsenal of its own, which the Soviet Union could not attack without risking nuclear retaliation by the Chinese.

By then, too, presumably political power in China will have passed from the older generation of Mao Tse-Tung and Chou En-Lai to the not-so-old military and political leaders coming along. Anyway, China will be less vulnerable to attack by the end of 1976.

This same time frame applies to the arms race, and this is why Henry Kissinger talks with such urgency and passion about it. Despite the present political weakness of President Nixon, even regardless of whether he is impeached or convicted, the progress of building and deploying the hydraheaded nuclea monsters is going to go on. If there is no agreement to limit the production and dispersal of the MIRU's in the next year or so, there will be so many of them on both sides by 1977 that the only hope then will be to try to agree to destroy what has been produced at such enormous risk and cost. This is a much harder proposition.

Again in the Middle East, despite all the political confusion, there is now a better chance for a compromise peace than there is likely to be in the foreseeable future.

Kissinger has won the confidence of President Sadat and King Faisal. The domination of Arab policy by the Soviet Union has been broken and the disunity of the Arab states, which always existed even during the last war, is now apparent.

Accordingly, the hope of an accommodation and maybe even of a tolerable peace exists now when Sadat and Faisal are willing to urge Syria to arrange a cease-fire along the Golan Heights and allow the larger peace talks to go

It is the worst time in many ways for the Israeli government and it is awkward for the U.S. government, but it is the only time we have right now and it looks better than any other prospect of the next three years. Finally, though the new French government is not yet elected, the new British government not yet in stride, and the West German government wracked by internal economic and even security problems, it may be that these internal troubles will force the West Europeans to consider more seriously the dangers of disunity and the advantages of a political union. (c) New York Times Service

Consider The Experts

Minden Neb Grandpa and I decided to make a conversational tape for our grandchildren - so we turned on our little recorder and started talking. It was fun but all too soon, the tape was full and many of the more important subjects hadn't been discussed.

Instead of starting a new tape, we decided to try our luck at erasing insignificant little spots and inserting what we really wanted the children to hear. It took a little time but the whole rearranged tape came out smooth as silk — no 18-minute breaks. no unintelligible words.

If amateurs such as Grandpa and Grandma - with a cheap little recorder — can do this, just think what the experts can do. DOLORES CHRISTENSEN

Against 'Super' Highway

Lincoln, Neb. If our present City Council members and county commissioners would take the time to go out to Wilderness Park and observe the wildlife and nature of this woodland, then I am sure they would not give their approval of land trade for the building of the super-highway (the West Lincoln By-pass).

This highway, if constructed, would hit the park in two places and run adjacent to it for its full length. This obviously would completely drive the deer, hawks, owls, beavers and other wildlife out of the park with nowhere to go, along with destroying the nature of this wilderness.

If our present elected officials will not help divert this "super" highway, then let's get someone in there who will. MICHELE MANNING

Eighty Cents An Hour

Axtell, Neb. This letter is written in response to "Taxpayer" whose letter appeared in The Star on April 30.

To think that state senators now earn $80 a day is absurd. Considering the number of hours my husband spends on legislative business, we figure he is earning about 80 cents an hour. The job of a state senator does not stop when the gavel is struck ending a legislative session. There are piles of mail to answer, conferences and meetings to attend, phone calls, constituent problems to handle, appearances and speeches to prepare, not to mention hours of driving time to meet the public demands of the job. Added to this are the weekly trips from home to Lincoln during the legislative sessions, all of which the senator must pay for himself. There are no medical benefits with the job, no overtime pay, no paid vacations.

Because the pay is so miserably low, a senator must have other jobs to support his family. This further cuts into the time he could otherwise be spending on state business.

I believe the salary a senator receives is directly related to the quality of legislation that is passed. To increase the pay from $4,800 to $8,100 a year is a step in the right direction.

Standard Repertoire Closes UNL Season

By RICHARD GRACE The final concert of the current school year was prominently. The choral treatpresented Sunday afternoon by the University of Nebraska School of Music at the University Coliseum on the UNL campus. With final exams due to begin Monday, the University Oratorio Choir and the University Symphony Orchestra brought a most successful performing arts season on the university campus to a close with a performance of "Symphony of Psalms" by Stravinsky and "Gloria" by Stravinsky and Poulenc are two 20th century musical giants who have contributed some of the most outstanding compositions of this century. The two choral works performed have become standard repertoire in recent years.

Each piece has highly distinctive musical trademarks that are so typical of its respective composer as well as being entirely representative of the 20th century musical idiom. In relation to their musical counterparts of the 19th century, both com-

Biggest Mark

A former deputy secretary of state (1953-59), he has made his biggest mark in the Legislature as chairman of the hyperactive Judiciary Committee, which has sponsored major court and correctional reform proposals.

Luedtke's priority concerns for 1975 would include full implementation of the correctional reform plan, improvement of juvenile justice, completion of concerns should include better the proposed district attorney management of the taxpayer's and public defender systems for the state and renewed consideration of alcoholism reform and recodification of the criminal state's water resources

Other priority issues for him include coordinated administration of post-high school education in the state, a more uniform retirement system for public employes and internal legislative reforms which would improve the operation of annual Wilson said, he was "not pleased legislative sessions.

In addition to the massive flow of legislation from the Judiciary Committee, Luedtke is perhaps best known for gaining bond financing approval for a new state office building and the environmental awareness" to University of Nebraska the Legislature. He is particular-

GARDEN-CHAPEL MAUSOLEUM

Why a Garden-Chapel Mausoleum?

Since first introducing to families in Nebraska and western Iowa the concept of garden mausoleum interment, many have shown a preference for the peace of mind that comes from knowing their departed loved ones will rest securely in the permanent protection of clean, dry chambers, or crypts, as if sleeping in the confines of an immaculately kept room. To fulfill the requirements of families preferring mausoleum interment as a means of honoring departed loved ones, Lincoln Memorial Park is now preparing to expand its present garden mausoleum complex and provide families with the choice that is offered by a garden-chapel mausoleum.

Is mausoleum entombment more expensive?

Taking into consideration the savings involved in not having to buy cemetery lots, interment vaults or monuments and the elimination of such other expenses as grave preparation, the cost of mausoleum entombment compares favorably with that of ground burial - particularly now, while pre-construction discounts are available.

Can I exchange property I own at Lincoln Memorial Park for mausoleum crypts?

Yes. Where present property owners wish to exchange their lots and bronze memorials for mausoleum crypts, arrangements can be made for an equitable exchange. Many families have been taking advantage of this opportunity.

May a loved one interred elsewhere be moved to the mausoleum?

Yes. It is being done, both by families whose departed loved ones have been interred at Lincoln Memorial Park and at other cemeteries.

Is provision made for perpetual care?

Yes. Perpetual Care Funds at Lincoln Memorial Park have and are being enlarged to provide for maintenance of the Garden-Chapel Mausoleum forever.

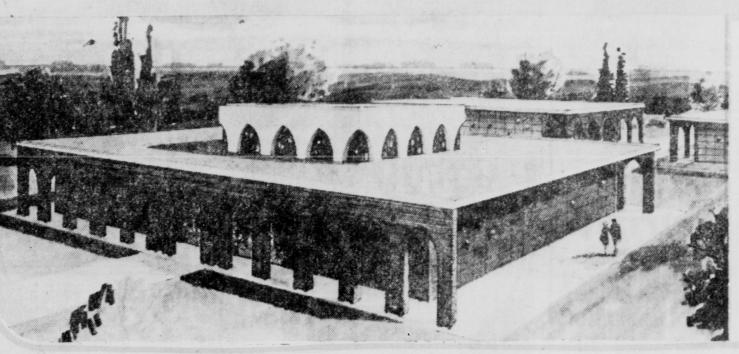

Why make plans now?

By reserving space for your family in our Garden-Chapel Mausoleum now, you can select from choice locations - take advantage of special pre-construction discounts-and, be spared the mental anguish and expense of this inevitable obligation at time of need. Monthly terms are available at no interest.

The black woman sees herself as 'a successful housewife and good provider in the role of mother and wife, attractive physically and intelligent.'

A Positive Self-Image

Star Staff Writer

"Wouldn't they be surprised when one day I woke out of my black ugly dream, and my real hair, which was long and blond, would take the place of the kinky mass that momma wouldn't let me straighten? My light-blue eyes were going to hypnotize them . . ."

And so, in her book "I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings," Maya Angelou describes her attitudes while growing up, black and poor, in the southern community of Stamps, Ark.

That was in the 1930's when it was easy to be ashamed of being black because of the wretched poverty that engulfed nearly all blacks and because of the forbidding white dominance which demanded sub-

But times have changed and "Black is Beautiful," is now the slogan.

No longer are blacks docilely accepting their previous stations in life, while hoping for greater rewards in heaven.

The emphasis now is placed on positive self-images, education and helping people to help themselves.

Misconceptions of black people and in particular black women, are slowly being

How does the black woman see herself in contemporary society?

She sees herself as a successful housewife and good provider in the role of mother and wife, attractive physically and intelligent, according to Joyce Jones and Fay Zollicoffer, graduate psychology students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The pair also pointed out the belief that the black woman is aggressive, flirty and endowed with the innate ability to raise a family without the help of a man is but a myth. Blacks, as well as those in any other race, need the unity of parents upon which to build a foundation for a secure family, the two said.

The UNL students also noted that black women fall into two catagories: the traditional role of mother and wife, or the modern feminist.

However, most black women "can't get into a sex revolution, because they are still involved with the black race and its liberation," Ms. Jones further explained.

"Black women are not being aggressive in the women's lib movement, as it presents itself now with housework and the like," agreed Mrs. Marine Scott, associated with the Malone Community Center and president of the Lincoln section, National Council of Negro Women

"We tend to a common agreement and not only on the local level — that the black woman has really been the mainstay of the family," Mrs. Scott continued. "It is common knowledge that white people have always looked at the black female and dealt with her to the castration of the black male

"But, there is a visable emergence of the status of the black male, which to the outside person may seem to be the diminishing of the female role.'

To the contrary, the black female's "activities have become strengthened," Mrs. Scott noted, "because she now has become involved in community

Using as an example the NCNW, Mrs. Scott said, "The national group was organized in 1935. It hit Lincoln in 1971. when we started with about 15 members. Now we have at least 70 women. We have not diminished; we have steadily grown.

"Black women today have developed an awareness of the need to become involved in such activities, to do something that affects their livelihood.

The organizations concerns include providing home ownership opportunities, centers for career advancement, recruiting and screening girls for the Job Corp through Women in Community Service (WICS), serving as a communication channel for both races and conducting a national campaign against hunger.

'We're concerned with the issues," Mrs. Scott continued, "but we have to train women into these responsibilities." Mrs. Scott also indicated that the Church is as important to the black people as it always has been, but in a new

"It used to be that the black woman went to church to get an emotional release," she explained. "Today, we still do meet in churches to organize action for women and to get spiritual guidance to attack the problems of unemployment, poverty, etc.

"Black people still believe in the church. There is more participation in the church than anywhere else," she added. "It is part of the black culture.

"We haven't lost the spiritual part, we've just resurrected it.

"The black minister has a captive audience on Sunday and gets to more black people.

A prime example is the Rev. Leon H. Sullivan who founded the Opportunity Industrialization Center program in Philadelphia in 1964, Mrs. Scott said.

The decision to develop such an organization was made after certain Philadelphia merchants were boycotted for three years because of their refusal to hire blacks. When the merchants agreed to change their policies, it was discovered that few blacks could qualify for the jobs because of their lack of skills, she noted. "Let's face it, there aren't that many successful blacks in the country," she stated. "We're reaching for the blacks still struggling.

"And it's the women's organizations that are doing it.'

'Anybody who thinks the 1950's were wonderful, either wasn't there or has self-induced amnesia.'

The we assumed that it was because syrupy run of the national nostalgia train backward toward never that the boy might be a rat the seemingly simplicity of the or the situation impossible to 1950s goes on.

Not everybody is clamoring A certain kind of look, of abord, however.

Most of all not Sandra Lukas, a 33-year-old writer-housewife who remembers better.

'Anybody who thinks the 1950s were wonderful, either wasn't there or has self-induced amnesia," she said in San Francisco, where she makes her home.

Take "Fat Emily," she suggested. Fat Emily, the heroine and name of Ms. Lukas's novel about the period, suffers from the constant conflict of inner reality with outside influences. What was expected of Fat Emily, of herself and all the Fat Emilies, in those days "had nothing to do with our own desires or capacities," she said.

For instance, she pointed, "My character Emily wasn't really fat any more than I was. But we thought we were because we didn't fit the Seventeen magazine ideal of how a teenager should look.'

"I suppose it was just as tough on boys," she added. "While we were all trying (or being urged) to be coy, demure facsimilies of Elizabeth Taylor, they had Marlon Brando's macho to live up to.'

It's her struggle, though, that remains clear.

The pressures for becoming a non-virgin in the fifties were strong, and even stronger was the idea that it would produce a state of bliss. So, says Ms. Lukas, "When things went wrong with Wasn't I pretty enough?"

of our own inadequacies begin with.

course, was expected to unlock almost any door, as well as the mysteries of sex. It didn't, and the novelist now believes that even the conventionally pretty girls, the ones everyone envied, had to ultimately face up to the dichotomy between the dream and the reality:

'What happens to a 40-yearold ex-prom queen who suddenly realizes that the high point of her life was over 20 years ago? She either goes out and joins the women's movement or jumps out a window.

Ms. Lukas regrets that her generation was so unprepared. On the other hand, she sees only marginal improvement in the situation since the fifties. She observed:

"There's more information available, but it still doesn't prepare us for the realities of sex, marriage and aging. We are still bombarded with so much beauty in movies and on TV, that if things go wrong in bed we're as likely to blame our own ugliness as Emily in 1958.

"People expect so much from their first sexual encounter that nothing can possibly measure up. Honeymoons are the same. It doesn't matter if a couple has been living together for five years, when they marry they expect violins that first night. If the earth doesn't tremble, the woman thinks, 'What did I do?

Ms. Lukas worked on "Fat Emily," her first novel, two hours each afternoon while her two small daughters napped. The process took three and onehalf months, followed by 18 months of finding an agent, then a publisher. Her husband, Christopher, a film maker, was "immensely supportive." After she got going.

"One day I just said to myself, 'Am I going to spend the rest of my life shocking people at dinner parties or am I going to be a writer?' From then on it was relatively easy," she said.

Although the response to the book has been mixed, she believes "most women like it. No matter when they grew up, or at what age they lost their virginity — a focal point of the novel — they say 'that's the way the truth can be a blow. In evaluating her feelings about the romantic futures of her own daughters, Ms. Lukas says, "I hope their experiences are a lot better than mine or Emily's. I hope they love as equals rather than supplicants. I hope they don't hurt themselves in an effort to 'show' me.

"Saving or not saving one's virginity isn't the point. What matters is preserving one's human dignity." And to believe in one's inner self more than one's outer self.

Ms. Lukas worries about her own ability to keep hands off, to not attempt to force her children into a group mold, or push them into doing what she as a parent thinks they should be happy.

"It's so frightening to parents when their kids don't conform," after the normal weaning age are more likely to have tooth decay than their cup-drinking friends

In fact dentists are reporting rapidly increasing numbers of one- to five-year-olds they now see in their practices with rampant tooth decay caused by extended bottle nursing, a condition often called "nursing bottle syndrome" or "nursing bottle mouth.'

Allowing a child to nurse for long periods of time on milk. juices or other liquids containing sugar can cause decayed and rotten teeth, warns the American Society of Dentistry for Children (ASCD), which has launched a national campaign to educate parents.

"Nursing bottle syndrome" affects the upper front teeth especially, and is caused by putting babies to bed with their bottles to help them go to sleep or letting them suck on their bottles for hours at a time between meals, long after normal weaning time has passed, said

Dr. Edward S. Mack of San Francisco, president of the organization

The sugar in the liquid which the child sucks from the bottle is the culprit, warns the society, pointing out that parents often fill the nursing bottle with sugar water or even soft drinks, as well as milk, fruit juices, and sweetened formulas

Milk, they said, normally does not cause decay because the bacteria that cause decay cannot store milk sugar as they can refined sugar, but when milk sugar or fruit juice sugar is sucked from a bottle hour after hour and day after day the bacteria make decay-producing acid from the sugars constantly available in the mouth.

Bottle nursing at nap and bed time not only increases the production of acid on the teeth. but tends to delay weaning, the society advised, so that some children are kept on the bottle beyond two or three years of age. Although World War II was going on at this time, humor and gaiety lived in the Governor's Mansion while the Griswolds did, 1941-1947. Mrs. Griswold, now Mrs. Erma Bomgardner of Scottsbluff, said she did more entertaining than practically any governor's wife.

During the war electrical equipment was hard to get. I remember the refrigerator kept breaking down and we couldn't buy a new one.

Bud Harrington is a man with a mission. He wants to remodel the entire cattle industry to fit the modern day needs of the homemaker who is seeking leaner beef. And he wants to do it at a lower cost.

Harrington is conducting a huge experiment to see if his theory of cutting costs in the livestock feeding industry will really work.

There are nearly 30,000 head of cattle in the experiment and a complete new feedlot with its own specially trained crew of more than 20 employees.

"Some people think we are backgrounding cattle here, but it is really just going back to feeding cattle the way our dad's did it. We use a lot more roughate, a lot less corn and, we hope, a lot less money," he explained.

Harrington has a team of buyers seeking just the right kind of cattle, light and likely to methods of feeding cattle. grow fast on a high silage ration. They are a mixture of English breeds and the so-called exotic breeds, carefully matched in the ears left on, 5% ground corn and 5% protein. The protein is a home-made formula developed by Harrington's staff and made at the feedlot mill.

"It just breaks the heart of some off the old sandhills cattlemen to see us mix up cattle like this, but it is working or we wouldn't do it," Harrington said.

Harrington is also feeding some straight breds (cattle of the same breed, not crossbred) on the same program for a rancher who wants performance data on his cattle.

Program Looks Good

How well is the program working so far? "We haven't completed the feeding program on any cattle yet, but we have some in the finishing stage so it won't be long now before we get the word. Based on data collected so far the program looks real good," he said.

Harrington has set up operation manuals for the various

"What we have done is set up standard reactions to the normal problems we get, the kind of ration, treatments, feed analysis and things like that. We are trying to remove as many of the The ration is 90% silage of uncertainties from a very uncerfinely chopped corn plants with tain business as possible," he explained.

> Harrington's crew is made up of specialists. There are cowboys who trained in handling light weight cattle, others in working heavy cattle that are on the socalled hot ration. There are marketing specialists who only sell cattle and other specialists who only buy cattle.

Even the grain buying is handled by a man with long experience in the grain trade.

Farmer Feeder Better Off Harrington runs one of the largest feeding operations in Nebraska but still thinks the real heart of the business will lie with the larger family farm feeder.

"If this guy will use more roughage and less grain he is going to be hard to beat. He doesn't have to haul silage as tar as we do. He dosen't have the labor problems we do, and he can personally supervise every step of production. I know darn well I can't do as efficient a job as the good farmer feeder except in the area of marketing,,' Harrington said.

"Marketing is where he falls down. He just waits for the buyer to come in and take the cattle out. If the farmer feeder will keep himself informed on kinds and grades of cattle and today's market price, he can get the best price available every time instead of just accepting what that buyer offers," he said.

Harrington thinks a major problem with farmer feeders is that they tend to hold cattle too long. "Get rid of them when they are ready. Holding them for a better market is an expensive proposition. If you can't get a good bid, you might have to take them to Omaha, but don't sit on them too long," he said.

Drove Him Crazy Another advantage the smaller feeder has is that he isn't bothered by phone calls. "I used to have a phone in the car. I took it out. They nearly drove me crazy with that thing," he said.

Hauling manure is another major problem on a huge operation. "We will give manure to any farmer who wants to haul it away. We buy very little fertilizer for our cropground. They could save quite a bit if they will just come after the manure," he If Harrington's experiment proves successful, it will mean that more beef will be produced in Nebraska. "We already know we can produce more beef on an acre of ground. If it works, we will be able to out-compete with the Texas feeder who must use grain, and it will mean lowercost meat for the housewife. We are pretty sure it will work, or we wouldn't have made this kind of investment," he said.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DONINICK COSTELLO Farm Editor

I spent more than a week driving through the wheat and cattle country in the western half of Nebraska gathering impressions of the changes and attitudes in rural Nebraska.

Generally, farmers are expressing a sort of concerned optimism about the future of the food production industry.

Older farmers are concerned about the ability of the younger farmers in the cattle business. "The kids are getting hurt real bad because they have high interest rates and are facing real losses. Most are not making enough to pay the interest on the money they have borrowed if business, and cattle feeders are their fill of beef for one day. being destroyed economically, a local banker told me.

A young ranch wife showed off the new color television and dishwasher in her home, commenting that if cattle prices had just staved up a little longer, they might have been able to do something about the antiquated plumbing in their 1908 home.

A hog producer explained he was operating on his own money instead of borrowing to expand. "If I stay out of the borrowing of money, I can operate at a lower out-of-pocket cost. Maybe I can survive the period of lower prices better than if I had

President Nixon maintained a of individuals or the more 31% positive job rating on his narrow ones centering on his performance in the White House handling of the tapes and his in a Harris Survey conducted relations with the House between April 15 and 20. He thus held onto the five-point gain he had previously registered from his all-time low of 26% early in negative marks from the public.

Nixon's rise has been almost tapes, the Watergate case exclusively based on rising public confidence in his foreign policy, and some easing of criticism of him over the energy

At the same time, the President appeared to be in deeper trouble than ever in his handling of the impending impeachment proceedings and in public belief about his involvement in Watergate related matters. The survey was taken, however, before the President's televised announcement that he was turning over edited transcripts of the Watergate tapes to the House Judiciary Committee.

By 75-17%, the public gave Nixon negative marks on "the way he is cooperating with impeachment proceedings," compared with a 71-21% negative standing in March. On his handling of the whole Watergate episode, President Nixon now received a 84-12% negative rating, compared with 80-16 per cent in March.

Significantly, personal confidence in Nixon hit an all-time low. No more than 13% of a national cross section of 1,503 adults said they believed the President "personally inspires confidence in the White House," compared with 48% who felt that way back in early 1973.

Periodically, the Harris Survey has asked samplings of the public:

"How would you rate the President on inspiring confidence personally in the White House - excellent, pretty good, only fair, or poor?'

With the exception of relations with our allies in Europe, Nixon comes up with uniformly positive ratings on foreign policy. Since February, his standing on "working for peace" has risen from 63% to 66%, on handling relations with Russia up from 52% to 59%, handling relations with China up from 50% to 54%, and on handling the Middle East crisis up from 43% to 51%.

Sherman Field In Bad Shape

Sherman Field - where Nebraska Wesleyan, the Lincoln high schools and Lincoln Legion teams play - has been allowed to deteriorate into a very sad shape.

The grass isn't kept short enough on both the infield and outfield, there are mounds and valleys on the dirt portion of the infield instead of being level and the pitching mound is anything but regulation height.

A lot of sandlot baseball diamonds are in better shape. Looking across the infield at Sherman Field at field level, it appears like an ocean with waves.

The new fieldhouse for Nebraska Wesleyan will emphasis "individual and intramural" participation according to college president Dr. Vance Rogers.

There will be no spectator seating in building that will feature a Tartan floor and be built just West of Magee Construction is scheduled to start in January with completion set for the following August. The only varsity sports that could end up being held in the fieldhouse would be indoor track and tennis.

There won't be any classrooms or offices in the building, but three new locker rooms are scheduled to be included.

Dr. Milt Evans, the tennis coach at NWU, should be elated over the building. Now his teams can work out early in the season and during adverse weather during the

Evans has been responsible for building the tennisprogram for the Plainsmen and the new fieldhouse should help him more in the future.

Butts' Comeback Looking Good

There were a few skeptics when the story came out that former Grand Island standout Randy Butts was attempting a comeback at Kearney State after dropping out of Nebraska.

Butts, a football and hurdle great, went out for spring football at Kearney State since he wasn't eligible for track.

The former Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star high school athlete of the year was the leading rusher in the Antelopes' final scrimmage with 72 yards in 15 carries.

Former Grand Island Northwest standout Dave Burke rushed for 61 yards in 14 carries in the same scrimmage and another Sunday Journal and Star high school athlete of the year, Tom Kropp, was one of the game's leading tacklers.

Kropp was moved from fullback to linebacker, which shouldn't hurt Kearney State's offense too much with Butts and Burke in the same backfield.

The Antelopes planned on using Kropp on both offense and defense last year, but he injured a knee early in the season to wipe out those plans.

Crete High basketball standout Loren Weiderspan has apparently chosen Kearney State over Doane for playing his college ball.

Bob Erickson, Doane's basketball coach and Al Papik, Doane's former athletic director and football and track coach, are now related since Erickson's daughter and Papik's son married.

Since Erickson is 6-3 with a full head of hair and Papik is quite a bit shorter and bald, one wag suggested that Erickson's grandsons will be short and bald, which isn't that good for a basketball coach.

Moran, O'Leary Like Sharing Spot

By RANDY EICKHOFF Star Sports Writer

Prominently displayed high on the top of Memorial Stadium is a legend chisled into a concrete block: "Not the victory but the action; not the goal but the game; in the deed the glory.

That's the key - the deed. The glory will come later sure as God made little green apples. Especially with the team effort and desire the Nebraska Cornhuskers displayed in their annual spring Red-White game Saturday.

Some of the positions on the Big Red team are sewn up. But others are not and one is the I-back. When two outstanding players are forced to split playing time at one position you'd think the rivalry would result in jealousies. But that's not the case with Nebraska's tandem I-back Jeff Moran and John

Both backs got the call for the Reds in the spring game with O'Leary gaining 56 yards on nine carries and Moran 20 on four plus nine more on a pass play from Dave Humm. But the yardage doesn't make a bit of difference to the senior Moran.

'It's great playing the tandem way," Moran said enthusiastically "This way none of us get tired and it lessens the injury possibility.

"We're pretty even," he said, then added critically, "he (O'Leary) may be a little better runner, but I think in the long run we're pretty even players."

O'Leary agrees with Moran. Playing in tandem has it's advantages.

'I don't think one I-back for a whole game is very advantageous for either the team or the player, O'Leary said. "That I-back is going to take a real beating if he has to play the whole game. This way we're both fresh and can play a lot better ball."

Moran likes to take pitchouts and sweep the ends while O'Leary . . . well, O'Leary's favorite play is whenever he gets his hands on the ball. "I like to go wide," Moran said definitely. "I like to make that turn. But I can't make that turn if the line isn't doing it's job. And this year that line has been fantastic. We can run anyplace. "You see," he said warming to his task, "It's a team game. And that's what we are. Nobody is hogging the glory and it doesn't really make any difference who scores as long as somebody does. We're working as a unit."

Both backs, however, have their favorite plays.

'That line is fantastic," O'Leary said. "We're working as a team now. I'm a little disappointed in my showing, but I should work that out before next fall. I've got to work on blocking as an I-Back.

"It's a lot easier when you get to play behind a fullback like Tony (Davis). He's consistent and won't make any mistakes," O'Leary said seriously. "He's a fine blocker and can really open up those holes for you. Like on that one touchdown. The line opened the hole and Tony went through and leveled that linebacker (Percy Eichelberger). All I had to do was run behind him and make the cut at the right time.'

As far as goals go, both players have just one they want to end the season as national champions.

'I didn't play when we were champs that one year," the personable Moran said. "That's my one goal. I want to go out a champion. We have a real good shot at No. 1 this year. I think the game of the century will be when we play Oklahoma," he grinned. "But I'm not going to be pointing towards them. I'm going to take them (the games) one at a time.

'We have a real fine team," O'Leary said. "We should go undefeated if we play well to our capacity. We should get the Big Eight title this year and that will probably be the national champion.' If the rest of the team has anything to say about it, the I-backs won't be disappointed. Nebraska No. 1, 1974? Possibly. It looks good right now. The Huskers are a team.

The advent of team tennis has been a controversial issue, and a number of the stars such as Stan Smith, Rod Laver, Arthur Ashe and Chris Evert have spurned lucrative WTT contract offers.

But there are still plenty of stars to go around—such as John Newcombe for Houston, Rosie Casals for Detroit, Jimmy Connors for Baltimore, Tony Roche and Francoise Durr for Denver,

Richards, who defeated Lincoln's Jay Stearns by only four points for last year's title, emerged the victor in the 25-lap main event after front-runner Dick Jensen blew a tire.

Jensen, of Aurora, started in the first row, with Richards and grabbed the lead.

For 18 laps Jensen, Richards of David City, Sterns, and Lincoln's Joe Wade ran 1-2-3-4 in a close battle, with no driver able to improve his position.

But then Jensen blew his tire allowing Richards to take a lead he never relinquished, although Stearns and Wade continued to press him until the finish. Aurora's Kent Tucker, who started far back in the pack, closed strongly for fourth, and had he not had problems getting through traffic early in the race, he might have finished higher. Earlier in the evening, Terry Nickles of Lincoln won the hobby stock event, a 12-lap affair. Richards also won the super

In other Saturday action, Iowa State beat Oklahoma State, Missouri whipped Colorado and Nebraska defeated Kansas.

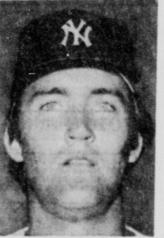

Oklahoma's victory over Kansas State gave the Sooners a 16-2 conference mark. Drumright, the league-leading batter, fattened his average with a single, a triple and a double. Drumright stole second after his single in the opening inning and crossed the plate with Oklahoma's first run on a single by Jacky Parish.

Drumright's triple in the fourth, after Pat Sullivan walked and Stan Lawrence singled. provided all the runs Oklahoma needed. Kansas State's conference record fell to 11-7.

In Nebraska's 5-4 victory over Kansas Saturday, freshman reliever Kirk Evmann retired the last 13 Jayhawk batters in a row. The victory upped Nebraska's record to 10-25 overall and 3-14 in the conference.

Missouri batters bombed Colorado pitching for five home runs in six hits Saturday as the Tigers whipped the Buffs, 15-3, to complete the three-game sweep. Designated hitter Dave Rotermel and catcher Mark Thiel slammed two home runs apiece, and second baseman Jeff Haferkamp chipped in with a

Mid-America: Milk Prices Unchanged

Omaha, Neb. (AP) - A spokesman for Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., said milk prices paid to Nebraska and western Iowa farmers will remain unchanged under a new standardized price system.

Robert Koehler of Omaha, manager of marketing, said the new system will go into effect in 20 states on Aug. 1.

Koehler said prices in the Nebraska-Western Iowa milk marketing order have been based on the Minnesota-Wisconsin price for years.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture said 39 milk marketing areas are affected by the method which gears producer prices to those paid by processing plants in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Although there has been some shuffling of dairy products made from the three classes of milk sold, Koehler said that when averaged out it "wouldn't make a nickel's worth of difference.'

U.N. Official To Address Lincoln Group

Abdulrahim Abby Farah, assistant secretary general of the United Nations for political affairs, will address the Annual Presidents Dinner Monday of the United Nations Association

Following a morning press conference, Farah, a citizen of Somalia, will meet with Gov. J. James Exon at the State Capitol and will tour the building and other attractions in the city.

A 6 p.m. reception for the U.N. official will be held at the Nebraska Center on East Campus, followed by the dinner in the Omaha Room at 6:30.

The evening dinner meeting is open to the public, and non-UNA members may inquire for reservations and tickets by calling Glenn Feather, president; or Don Miller, vice president.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Vindication Of Nixon Predicted

GEN. HAIG . . . Nixon's chief of staff.

Washington (AP) — President Nixon's chief lawyer indicated Sunday he believes the House impeachment inquiry hinges on whether the President approved hush money payments to Watergate defendants

And the presidential tape transcripts released last week, said attorney James St. Clair, prove that Nixon "neither authorized nor knew" about such a payment.

Both St Clair and White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. appearing separately on televised interview programs, predicted that Nixon would be vindicated in the House

Haig said the edited transcripts were published "warts and all" by the President "to convince the American people for the first time that he had nothing to hide

St Clair insisted that "the tapes make it clear" that Nixon rejected, in a March 21, 1973 conversation with Jonn W Dean III the demands for money from Watergate conspirator E Howard Hunt

Yet, there are several apparent con-

Moments later, the President says

"But in the end, we are going to be bled to death and in effect look like a cover-up. So that we can't do." Later yet, the topic turns to a specific demand from Hunt for $120 - 000 Nixon "Would you agree that that's the prime thing that you damn well better get that done?"

A month later on April 17 Nixon and H R (Bob) Haldeman are trying to recall the March 21 discussion Nixon says "I didn't tell him to go get the money did I?" Haldeman responds 'No

St Clair who appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press said that in releasing the transcripts Nixon felt he had given the House Judiciary Committee 'everything he thinks they need

Asked why Nixon would not leave it up to the committee to decide that St Clair said only that 'I hope and believe they come to the conclusion that this is the full story of Watergate'

St Clair will represent the President in proceedings expected to begin this week in the panel's impeachment inquiry. He has been granted the right to question witnesses, but not cross examine them

20% Of City Gas Bought At

By LYNN ZERSCHLING Star Staff Writer

The city is paying from $500 to $3 000 a month for over-the-counter gasoline purchases to keep city cars on the streets

The city has been forced to compete for gasoline on the open market to meet about 20% of its requirements Gary Kitt assistant purchasing agent said in an interview

Lincoln is receiving 80^{c_c} of its gasoline allotment from Standard Oil Co Kitt said

And that reduction has resulted in a cutback in service by some city departments, including the park department and the paying and repair divisions. Kitt noted that the Federal Energy Office requires emergency systems such as the police and fire departments to be fueled 100 \widetilde{r} of their requirements

And that presents a problem down at the city garage where much of the gas is pumped out to city vehicles

The garage is receiving an average of 23,000 gallons a month, Kitt said Police cruisers eat up almost 20,000 of those gallons, leaving a spare 3,000 gallons a month to be split by other departments

Those departments include engineering traffic engineering health department air pollution housing administration. Project on Aging Municipal Court and the mayor's car. Normally those vehicles require around 6 000 gallons a month

Kitt named health and aging as two departments which now

regularly buy their gas from filling stations

With the cutback in gasoline received from Standard Oil Kitt said the city receives an average of 52 000 gallons a month while the Lincoln Electric System (LES) is receiving 9 000 Actually the city needs from 65 000 to 70 000 gallons of gas and LES requires 12 000 gallons a month

The 80% allotment from Standard Oil is guaranteed, Kitt explained, while outside purchases are not

It just depends on who has some extra supplies—he said In addition to battling the gasoline squeeze—the city has been

From Oct 1 1973 to April 1 1974, the price of both premium and regular gas has risen by

Last fall the city bought premium for 23 48c a gallon and regular for 21 48c. Kitt reported This spring premium costs 40 56c and regular 37 56c a gallon. The outside purchases average from three to five cents more a gallon.

Retail

Although the amount of gasoline available to the city on a month by month basis is not known, one thing is — more gas eaters are on the way

By the end of May 10 new minibuses are scheduled to roll into Lincoln for the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) All consume gasoline

There's no way to tell what effect the new minis will have on the city's gasoline dilemma. Kitt said. The LTS Board still is working out plans for the minibuses use in Lincoln.

Brandt's Party Still Holds On

SAARBRUECKEN West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt's Social Democrats held their ground Sunday in the Saarland state elections though the opposition Christian Democrats scored big gains against other manor parties

Friedel Laeppel the Social Democrat state chairman said the vote showed the party was recovering strength in the wake of defeats in Hamburg Schleswig Holstein and Rhineland-Palatinate. After those elections a spy scandal hit Brandt's government and was expected to shake public contidence in his policy of triendship with the Eastern European bloc

With more than half the votes counted in the elections to the regional council, the Christian Democrats had 51.7 per cent of the one up from 39.8 per cert in 1968 s final returns. The Social Democrats had 37.1 per cent against 37.4 per cent in 1968.

Job-Hunting Season At Peak Right Now BLIDDE GLENTHER after New Years which is caused

By LIANE GLENTHER Star Staff Writer

If you are unemploved and looking for work statistics indicate this is one of the best times of the year to find a job

Gene Landkamer, manager of the Lincoln office of the State Employment Service, said the biggest shortages of people to place on jobs come in April and early May

This is just a segment of the annual unemployment cycle. Each year it follows the same basic path fluctuating slightly with drastic changes in the weather or the overall economy.

Depending on weather conditions un employment is generally highest during January. February and March Landkamer said. Certain industries such as construction road paying and street repair almost close up shop completely during the winter months, he said.

If weather conditions in April and May are favorable for construction and outside work, the demand for laborers frequently exceeds the supply he said. Hence the sharp drop in unemployment for those two months.

Then in June, unemployment figures generally bounce back up, he said Students and teachers flood the job market looking for summer jobs and recent graduates seek permanent employment

The unemployment curve starts back down in July and August he said as most summer job seekers have either found work or quit pounding the pavement

In September and October unemployment hits another low after students are back in school. Landkamer said there is usually a crucial shortage in September for construction restaurant hotel and motel employes.

As the Christmas holidas approach the demand for workers in retail in dustries steadily grows he said. The comes the slight rise in unemplayment

after New Years which is caused by a drop in retail trade

Despite scattered reports of an economic slowdown or even worse a recession. Landkamer indicated the employment outlook for Lincoln is quite rosy.

He said that even the off-mentioned recession would have little effect on Lin coln's economy "unless people stopped retail spending

Lincoln's industries are healthy and generally independent of the national economy he said "This is one reason why unemployment here is lower than the national figures" he said

Landkamer pointed out that state government and education are big employers in Lincoln and that 'neither one would be seriously affected by a

He also noted that most local industry is related to agriculture and not many manufacturers were involved in either the war or space efforts

The types of things that are manufactured here are demand items, he said, and would be in demand whether there is a recession or not

Landkamer also noted that reponse to the announcement that Kawasaki will build a new plant here has been "very positive"

He said he has had many job inquiries even from people out-of state

It isn't necessarily so that 'a lot of unemplo-ment is needed to attract industry he said

If industry comes in people will follow it

And if the industry is very strong as I suspect Kawasaki will be more people will come in than the industry itself will be able to nire the continued. They like more workers available for other its.

He said impanies look for such things a great transportation facilities and live is the force on the need to markets and is taxing.

Judiciary Panel Said Not Split

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two Democratic and Republican members of the House Judiciary Committee said Sunday the committee's party line vote on the Watergate transcripts should not be interpreted as a sign of a partisan split on the impeachment issue.

After receiving edited transcripts from the White House instead of the actual tape recordings, the committee voted 20 to 18 to inform President Nixon he had not complied with its subpoena.

"Few if any really thought he was in full compliance," Rep. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., said. "The difference in opinion was in the proper response.

Rep. Thomas Railsback, R-Ill., said the vote reflected a clash on procedures but not on the committee's ultimate goal of reaching the truth in its impeachment in-

Sarbanes said the members had agreed unanimously on the rules that will govern the committee's evidentiary hearings.

Railsback said he voted against sending Nixon the simply stated noncompliance letter because he favored a proposal to continue efforts to reach a mutually satisfactory compromise.

Both congressmen said the transcripts were a first step but not adequate by themselves for the impeachment investigation. Railsback said he would prefer that committee counsels be included in Nixon's offer to let the committee chairman and ranking minority member hear the tapes to compare them with the transcripts.

However, both said they would like to hear the tapes for themselves.

"A sentence can have a very different meaning depending on how it is said." Sarbanes said. Railsback said, "The edited tapes will permit us to better grasp the actual conversations. I hope the President will relent and let us see the edited tapes.

Failure to respond to such a subpoena might become the basis of a charge in articles of impeachment, Sarbanes said. Railsback said he would like to see the U.S. Supreme Court intervene in such a situation.

The two congressmen also said it may be necessary to grant immunity from prosecution to witnesses it summons forthe impeachment inquiry.

"This question — the impeachment act - should have preemptive importance ... if we decided we need somebody's testimony . . . we probably will have to grant immunity," Railsback said.

"We don't like to grant immunity, but it may become necessary to get the full story," Sarbanes added.

Neither would say whether he detected evidence of impeachable offenses from his reading of the transcripts. However, Railsback, speaking about Nixon's former counsel and chief accuser in the Watergate scandal, said, "If I were president of the United States, I would not want John Dean advising me."

Troops Routed At Ports

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) - Khmer insurgents routed 400 government troops from two coastal positions Sunday in an apparent drive against the airport of Kompong Som. Cambodia's main deepwater

Veal Rinh and Veal Traong, five miles apart, had been under Khmer Rouge attack for the past five days. Each was manned by about 200 men and they were believed to have suffered substantial casualties, army sources

Observers said the insurgents may seek to continue their drive west and attack the vital Kompong Som airfield 20 miles away.

Near Phnom Penh, government troops continued their drive up Route 5 north of the city in efforts to rescue some 40.-000 troops and refugees besieged at Longvek.

The army is reportedly trying to reach two barriers insurgents have thrown across the Tonle Sap River, which flows parallel to Route 5. With the barriers removed, the government could send navy craft up the river to reinforce and resupply the besieged city.

Since late March, the sevensquare-mile camp 25 miles north of Phnom Penh has been under constant shelling, and an average 30 to 40 government soldiers are killed or wounded every day.

Cambodian air force planes flew scores of bombing runs around the camp Sunday to drive otf rebels pressing close on the perimeter. In Longvek, government troops recaptured a recruit training center at the southwestern corner of the House and the special Watergate tests on other hypotheses offered after prosecutor's office to examine tapes of the panel's initial conclusions were made several White House conversations.

Portuguese Communists Strong

Lisbon - The Communist Party has emerged from suppression to become the strongest and best organized political force in the new Portugal being shaped by the military junta that recently seized control of the country. The junta, still seeking a balance between what it considers the proper enjoyment of freedom and its abuse, issued a warning against public employes taking direct action to oust superiors with strong links to the old regime.

Crowd Rages In Mozambique

Lourenco Marques, Mozambique - A roaring crowd of several thousand whites iammed the plaza in front of the city hall in Laurenco Marques, the capital of Mozambique. and demanded that the junta in Lisbon keep Mozambique Portuguese.

Newark Is Fraud Center

Newark - Newark has become a center for mail frauds in which the unwary are being bilked of millions of dollars a year through advertisements for work-at-home schemes, weight-reduction gimmicks, substances promising prolonged "bridegroom" strength and sexual stamina, and "miracle" cures for illness. Despite a crackdown by federal authorities, the frauds continue to proliferate, partly because most consumer-protection agencies give them comparatively low priority among business agents.

By LESLIE H. GELB

Washington - The North and South Vietnamese continue to build up their military forces in violation of the 1973 cease-fire agreement, but the American intelligence community still sees military stalemate ahead - at least for another

Several officials said that intelligence estimates showed that Saigon's forces had a big lead as of January, 1973, and are improving, but that Hanoi's forces are improving faster and closing the gap.

American officials believe that Siagon's real problem for the next year is not the likelihood of a major Communist offensive, but inflation, Running at the 1973 rate of about 80%, inflation could create serious morale problems and undermine political support for the Thieu government.

These nonmilitary factors are seen by the intelligence community, the officials said, as central to the outcome of renewed large-scale

In the meantime, multary sources and other officials said the key military issue was which side could bring more combat forces and firepower to bear on particular battles.

Troop Count

The latest intelligence report lists Communist combat forces in South Vietnam at about 180,000, including 30,000 to 40,000 Viet Cong. In addition, there are about 80,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in Cambodia and about 90,000 in Laos, as well as 50,000 in reserve in North Viet-

They are opposed by about 360,000 South Vietnamese soldiers. This does not include the large number of South Vietnamese fighter aircraft and helicopters.

The South Vietnamese forces, the sources said, are spread throughout the country defending villages and highways to cities. The North Vietnamese forces, on the other hand, do not have much territory to defend and are free to concentrate their forces in specific places when they are ready to fight.

The sources said, however, Saigon forces

could still be rushed into battle with helicopters to maintain a superiority in numbers.

'Amazing' Road Program But Saigon's advantage in mobility is gradually being offset by what officials call "Hanoi's amazing road-building program." Begun before the cease-fire and now known as Corridor 613, Hanoi's new highway in South Vietnam is 500 miles long, running from the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam to 80 miles northwest of Saigon The corridor supplements the traditional infiltration route in Laos known as the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Unlike the trail, it is usable in all seasons, fully paved and mostly two-laned

The significance of the corridor, the sources explained, is that Hanoi can now send soldiers, supplies, and arms to the southern reaches of South Vietnam in half the time of years past. Officials estimate that the trip now takes 30 days.

Moreover, these officials say, the corridor has about 500 miles of feeder roads, extending at strategic locations into the South Vietnamese

Corridor Well Defended

The corridor is defended, one military source said, by about double the number of antiaircraft guns that Hanoi had in South Vietnam before the cease-fire. This source also said that there was "some evidence" of radar-guided artillery and the SA-7 missile used by the Arabs in the recent Middle East War.

Along this new highway, the military source said, the North Vietnamese have rolled 400 new tanks to add to the 200 already in the south, and have doubled their artillery. Adjoining the highway, sources said, is a four-inch pipeline for

The officials also stressed the estimate of the intelligence community that Hanoi stockpiled in South Vietnam six months' to two years' worth of arms and ammunition, measured according to the level of fighting during 1972.

When the test does come, and most officials believe it will, the question boils down to which side's will and leadership will hold out longer.

More Than Just Firecrackers Said Likely To Be Off Market

Washington (UPI) — New government rules which will ban firecrackers nationwide could put other forms of fireworks off the market as well, according to federal safety officials.

The rules, to be published later this month by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, will be designed to make sure that fireworks do not go off too quickly, that their flight patterns are not erratic and that their materials are not too flimsy.

Those devices not conforming my not be sold. One officials said this could particularly affect bottle rockets - a sort of a skyrocket on a stick which is launched by placing the stick in the neck of a bottle. The sticks on such devices are now too weak to assure a straight flight pattern, he said, and they may effectively be banned as a commission originally had proposed a ban on both firecrackers and bottle rockets but last week's announcement said the outright ban, which will be in effect along with the safety rules by this Fourth of July, will apply only to firecrackers. Large size firecrackers, such as M-80s and cherry bombs, already are banned.

Another safety rule will probably involve fuse length to make sure devices don't go off too soon.

Some persons have been injured by cone tountains, for instance, when they showered sparks on them while they were still bent over the fuse.

The ban will have little economic impact on the people who make fireworks in the United States, since all firecrackers and most bottle rockets are imported. But it will cut into the importing business. Last year about $180 million worth of fireworks of all kinds were sold, with firecrackers and bottle rockets accounting for about 43% — or $70 million — of that total.

The commission said it has received very little response from Fourth of July revelers so far, although the ban when originally announced as a proposal sparked petition drives from firecracker fans in some parts of the country.

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, however, does not think the commission went far enough.

"They're deluding the public by taking off firecrackers and leaving on foman candles, fire fountains, fire cones and a host of other very dangerous items," said James F. O'Neil. director of industrial services for the society.

He also charged that the safety standards themselves were written with industry help.

Next Week's Ballot: Amendments

The governmental experiment undertaken by Nebraskans almost 40 years ago has withstood the test of time and has proved itself. The unique one-house, nonpartisan legislature is about as uncomplicated, open, accountable and responsive a representative body as can be found anywhere in the 50 states.

And for helping to perpetuate that basically sound system through dedicated hard work, state senators are currently rewarded with part-time pay for what has become a full-time job.

It's about time that squeaky tight Nebraskans, who demand much of their representatives at the Capitol and all too frequently ignore the positive aspects of the system that serves them, begin to pay for what they get by approving Amendment No. 1 on the May 14 state ballot. The proposed amendment would provide state senators with a monthly salary not to exceed $675, compared to the present $400 per month. Even that proposed boost in pay amounts to inequitable compensation, but it is an attempt to rectify the situation.

Approving the pay proposal is simply a matter of people being fair with those they elect to represent them. It would make the time spent by senators away from job and family less expensive. I might also help to encourage able men and women who now feel they can't afford to do so to run for the Legislature. For these reasons, The Star recommends a "FOR" vote on Amendment No. 1.

Amendment No. 2 rounds out the mercifully short list of proposed constitutional revisions which Nebraska voters will consider this spring.

The proposed change would remove the lieutenant governor as presiding officer of the Legislature and thus his right to cast tie-breaking votes, and would provide that the members of the Unicameral choose their own presiding officer.

This complements a change approved by voters in 1972 which goes in effect with the coming election under which the governor and lieutenant governor candidates run as a team in the general election and under which the elected lieutenant governor is assigned administrative duties by the governor.

Amendment No. 2 would free the lieutenant governor from his legislative duties in order to tend to whatever administrative functions the governor assigns. It would, further, sharpen the distinction between the executive and legislative branches of state government and would help prevent partisan considerations from dominating the nonpartisan Unicameral in light of the fact that lieutenant governors from now on will be elected as members of partisan teams and as administrative partners.

For those reasons, and for consistency's sake, The Star recommends a "For" vote on Amendment No 2.

Space Age

NEW YORK - Speaking from the grave, as it were, Nikita Khrushchev has added his own judgment to the many being heaped on his old sparring mate, Richard Nixon. A swatch of of the late Soviet leader's memoirs, running in Time magazine before being published in book form, both clouts and praises Nixon. And rakes some treasured scribblings in a reporter's notebook.

BOB CONSIDINE

The famous "Kitchen Debate" was not confined to the model kitchen of that "typical American home" we built to impress the Russians at the American exhibition in Moscow's Sokolniki Park. The debate began at their first meeting (July 24, 1959) in Khrushchev's Kremlin office. Khrushchev won the first round. Echoes of the introductions had barely died away (I wrote at the time) when Khrushchev began to question the vice president sharply on a resolution passed in the U.S Senate a day or two before. The resolution expressed sympathy for the "captive nations" behind the Iron Curtain. In the course of its passage, several senators from states where large numbers of refugees and others tracing their roots back into Eastern Europe lived and voted, attacked Khrushchev as an arch despot.

Khrushchev demanded to know whether this Senate resolution marked an official change in American foreign policy. Nixon attempted to explain that there is a difference between a resolution and a fact of policy. Then why, Khrushchev wanted to know, was it passed just at this time when Nixon was embarking on a good-will tour?

Distressed, and hoping to get his tour ott on the best foot possible, Nixon said in

Determinedly polite, Nixon shook hands warmly and enthused, "Oh, yes, I met Mr. Mikoyan when he was in Washington. In the United States we have great respect for Mr. Mikoyan's ability as a trader. Everybody in our country recognizes Armenians as the greatest of traders." Through his interpreter, Khrushchev barked, "Then your country has forgotten how to trade. Mikoyan couldn't make a single deal while he was there." He stomped off. $\Delta \Delta \Delta$

"Maybe I shouldn't have gotten into that," Nixon whispered to Daly and me as we trudged in Khrushchev's footsteps. (How could any of us know that 13 years later the same Nixon would promote historic trade and other deals with Khrushchev's successor, Leonid Brezhnev?) There wasn't a kitchen in sight when the "Kitchen Debate" began. The wrangle between the temporal tsar of all the Russias and the man from Whittier began in RCA's color-TV pavilion. The schedule called for Nixon to show it off to Khrushchev as an American scientific marvel, make a brief video tape with him, ty it got. Khrushchev was genuinely and move on.

But Khrushchev noticed that the glassed-in gallery that looked down into the studio was crowded with attentive and admiring constituents. The prospect of appearing on a tape that would be seen on American TV also struck him as a lively challenge. Nixon, on cue, started to explain the wonders of the RCA invention, but khrushchev cut him short, declared that Russian scientists had come up with the process years before, and then charged that Nixon was responsible for the breakdown in U.S.-Soviet relations. There were a lot of other charges during the monologue, which was roundly applauded by the Russian audience.

Clearly, it was then or never for Nixon. Suddenly he jabbed his right forefinger at his truculent guest. "Just a moment." he said, loudly. "You're trying to dominate this talk. You would've made a good lawyer. Don't give me your ultimatums.' (It was a picture which, reprinted by the millions, almost made Richard Nixon president of the United States in 1960. If it had, well, he would have been out of office years before his present travail.)

There were two other clashes that day, in the aforementioned kitchen and when Khrushchev attempted to interrupt Nixon's speech officially opening the U.S. exhibit. "Sit down'" Nixon commanded. 'As we say in my country, I have the

his low regard for Nixon at that time was based on his belief that the vice president was a "McCarthyite." (He also said at that time, when reminded that Nixon might become president of the United States. "That would be like sending a rabbit to guard the cabbage patch ") But the current memoirs contain a poignant apology, too During a business trip too Moscow in 1965 as a representative of Pensi, Nixon asked to see Khrushchev, by then an unperson. His request was turned down by the new crowd. But Khrushchev heard about it and now, from wherever he is, speaks of Nixon's "genuine human courtesy," adding, "I am very sorry I didn't have an opportunity to thank him for his consideration, and to shake hands

'Control With Care'

The Lancaster County Weed Control Authority is not traditionally regarded as a launching pad for promising political careers. Nor is it thought of as a position from which power is arrogated or from which oppression flows.

Unless you happen to be a bindweed or a musk thistle.

It is a body of nominally-paid elected officials who supervise and appropriate money for the control of "noxious" weeds, and hardly a more mundane political job can be found.

Still, during a time when government at all levels is held suspect, might it not be appropriate for the winds of change to sweep the weed control authority?

Adopting the campaign slogans "Control With Care" and "if you can't beat 'em, eat 'em," Roger Welsch, University of Nebraska professor, folklorist and natural foods lover, is seeking one of two urban seats on the County Weed Control Authority. And thus far throughout a droll but also serious campaign, he's gotten good ink Euell Gibbons, the man who eats pine trees, has endorsed him. Welsch was featured in a Charles Kuralt "On the Road" segment on CBS. The enthusiasm, humor and concern which emanate from the campaign make bright, refreshing copy.

All good fun aside, if more candidates for office were as knowledgeable about and interested in what they seek to do as Welsch is, government would be in better shape.

Welsch believes people should learn more about vegetation which they automatically mow, burn or spray. He claims to believe in control, but he's also concerned about the proper use of chemicals. What we like most about his campaign is what we see as its underlying premise: that there can be more gentle harmony between man and nature than man will admit.

Voters should listen to what Welsch is talking about. He's not a radical. It's just that he doesn't think that the only good weed is a dead weed.

JAMES RESTON

On (expletive), it's time to write another column. Now that the President's X-rated, abridged. edited, carefully washed and screened private conversations are public, we may release similar transcripts of the tape-recorded conversations with his lawyer. Mr. President, you wanted to see me?

Yeah, sit down, Jim. I'd like to get a reading on how we're doing in Peoria. Huh?

Ah, that's a saying we used to have around here when Bob and John were running the shop. Oh, my, they were a lot more fun than General Haig. We had such intricate plots then. a real feel for the jugular, naked hate and blood threats ... but I mustn't get into any reminiscing about the good old days. How does it look for us today?

Well, sir, I'd say things are looking up. It all started. I suppose, with the acquittal of Mitchell and Stans

Yeah We usually win when it's put to a vote. Twelve to nothing, eh? Another landslide. Heh. heh

Yes, Mr. President. Then, of course, your TV speech was a real plus. It remains to be seen, of course, but we may mark that later as the point when you turned the corner on this

I must confess I thought I was at my best on that one . . . with a little help from old Abe. ☆ ☆ ☆

Then. I think the strategic breakthrough we needed came when the Judiciary Committee split on partisan lines on the 20-18 vote last week As you know, that has been the first priority. Split the committee along party lines. and we're on our way to winning the whole thing

I agree. Jim That was the big one we needed. So what next?

We will continue the legal strategy we mapped out earlier. And I assume you will continue to take your case to the country. Right?

You bet The receptions have been fantastic. My enemies always underrate me. They always have. And they have always paid for that. Once we get this behind us, they're gonna . oh. excuse me. Jim. I got sorta carried

Well, I must admit, Mr. President, I was startled when you leaped on top of the desk.

I'm sorry I've been under pressure They've been after me . those (expletive) somewhers . . . they squeal and sneak around enemies . . . trying to destroy me. . . not get away with it. They'll not destroy the presidency. I shall defend it to the last. I'll not let them bring this country down, this the strongest, most powerful, largest, richest country in the (expletive), I think I'm caught.

Hold it. Mr. President, let me help vou. Turn a little that way. There, hold it. Okay. Does that happen very often?

Oh, I've told them to fix that flag. Sometimes, when I walk over there to stand by the flag, it's, I don't know, sorta like a Venus flytrap or something. Sometimes I just can't get out of it after it's wrapped around me

Well, Jim, I want to tell you how much I appreciate your work. I think it's turning our way now, and I know part of that is because of your efforts. I know it hasn't been easy for you.

Easy for me, sir? My problems have been nothing as compared to yours. You're the one who has performed so admirably under all this pressure

Well, thanks, counselor. You're a saint Heh, heh.

Yes, sir. Heh, heh

You know I am innocent, don't vou, Jim?

I said you do know I'm innocent. Yes, Mr. President, I believe you are. But how am I going to convince the country? Even many of those who don't want me impeached say they think I'm guilty. But, guilty of what?

That's just it. I'm not sure Perhaps guilty of being the President.

That does seem to have become a crame lately. I know Lyndon Johnson was certainly indicted by public opinion. I've got it much worse, of course, but it started then Maybe people have come to resent power, Mr. President. Perhaps they resent the use of presidential power . . . to wage war, to influence elections, to reward friends and punish enemies, to bully and deceive when necessary.

If that's the case, Jim, future presidents face the same nightmare which I have undergone

Yes, sir It looks that way Well thanks for stopping by Jim before I leave, I wonder could I ask you a question? Sure, go ahead If you ARE impocent, as we both believe.

why . You too, Jim?

The Tyranny Of History

WASHINGTON — One of the perversities of history is that it refuses to adjust itself to the convenience of men or nations. It keeps asking the most critical questions at the most awkward times. It ought to know that President Nixon is preoccupied with the Watergate and that everywhere there is now political disruption and a longing for quiet to sort things out, but it will not wait for a new political order.

In fact, the next three years are likely to be decisive on four fundamental questions:

1. Whether there will be peace or war between the Soviet Union and China.

2. Whether the race in strategic arms - particularly multiple nuclear warbeads on intercontinental missiles - will get beyond control. 3. Whether there will be a new order or war in the Middle east, threatening the very existence of the state of Israel. 4. Whether Europe will move forward toward political union and a tursting partnership with the United States, or fall back into nationalsim and encourage American isolationism. Life, of course, has a way of going on regardless of the prophecies of calendar worshippers, but there is something very special about these coming three years. ☆ ☆ ☆ The danger of war between Moscow and

Peking is not a Sunday supplement nightmare. Nothing troubles Secretary of State Kissinger more than this question, and presumably he has more reasons than anybody else here for worrying about it

But right now is the dangerous time - not three years from now By then China will have an offensive nuclear arsenal of its own, which the Soviet Union could not attack without risking nuclear retaliation by the Chinese

By then, too, presumably political power in China will have passed from the older generation of Mao Tse-Tung and Chou En-Lai to the not-so-old mulitary and political leaders coming along. Anyway, China will be less vulnerable to attack by the end of 1976.

This same time frame applies to the arms race, and this is why Henry Kissinger talks with such urgency and passion about it. Despite the present political weakness of President Nixon. even regardless of whether he is impeached or convicted, the progress of building and deploying the hydraheaded nuclea monsters is going to go on. If there is no agreement to limit the production and dispersal of the MIRU's in the next year or so, there will be so many of them on both sides by 1977 that the only hope then will be to try to agree to destroy what has been produced at such enormous risk and cost. This is a much harder proposition. ☆ ☆ ☆

Again in the Middle East, despite all the political confusion, there is now a better chance for a compromise peace than there is likely to be in the foreseeable future.

Kissinger has won the confidence of President Sadat and King Faisal. The domination of Arab policy by the Soviet Union has been broken and the disunity of the Arab states. which always existed even during the last war. is now apparent

Accordingly, the hope of an accommodation and maybe even of a tolerable peace exists now when Sadat and Faisal are willing to urge Syria to arrange a cease-fire along the Golan Heights and allow the larger peace talks to go

It is the worst time in many ways for the Israeli government and it is awkward for the U.S. government, but it is the only time we have right now and it looks better than any other prospect of the next three years.

Finally, though the new French government is not yet elected, the new British government not yet in stride, and the West German government wracked by internal economic and even security problems, it may be that these internal troubles will force the West Europeans to consider more seriously the dangers of disunity and the advantages of a political union.

Consider The Experts

Minden, Neb.

Grandpa and I decided to make a conversational tape for our grandchildren - so we turned on our little recorder and started talking. It was fun but all too soon, the tape was full and many of the more important subjects hadn't been discussed.

Instead of starting a new tape, we decided to try our luck at erasing insignificant little spots and inserting what we really wanted the children to hear. It took a little time but the whole rearranged tape came out smooth as silk — no 18-minute breaks. io unintelligible words.

If amateurs such as Grandpa and Grandma - with a cheap little recorder — can do this, just think what the experts can do. DOLORES CHRISTENSEN

Against 'Super' Highway

Lincoln, Neb. If our present City Council members and county commissioners would take the time to go out to Wilderness Park and observe the wildlife and nature of this woodland, then I am sure they would not give their approval of land trade for the building of the super-highway (the West Lincoln By-pass).

This highway, if constructed, would hit the park in two places and run adjacent to it for its full length. This obviously would completely drive the deer, hawks, owls, beavers and other wildlife out of the park with nowhere to go, along with destroying the nature of this wilderness.

If our present elected officials will not help divert this "super" highway, then let's get someone in there who will. MICHELE MANNING

Eighty Cents An Hour

Axtell, Neb.

This letter is written in response to "Taxpayer" whose letter appeared in The Star on April 30.

To think that state senators now earn $80 a day is absurd. Considering the number of hours my husband spends on legislative business, we figure he is earning about 80 cents an hour. The job of a state senator does not stop when the gavel is struck ending a legislative session. There are piles of mail to answer, conferences and meetings to attend, phone calls, constituent problems to handle, appearances and speeches to prepare, not to mention hours of driving time to meet the public demands of the job. Added to this are the weekly trips from home to Lincoln during the legislative sessions, all of which the senator must pay for himself. There are no medical benefits with the job, no overtime pay, no paid vacations

Because the pay is so miserably low, a senator must have other jobs to support his family. This further cuts into the time he could otherwise be spending on state business I believe the salary a senator receives is directly related to the quality of legislation that is passed. To increase the pay from $4,800 to $8,100 a year is a step in the right direction.

Foreign Students Lose Work

Washington - The United States Immigration and Naturalization Service has ruled permitted to accept jobs during the summer vacation because such employment would deprive young Americans, particularly minority group members and Vietnam veterans, of needed job opportunities.

The decision was based on a recommendation by the Man-living costs power Administration, which cited high unemployment among American youths that was caused partly by summer employment of aliens.

Technically, foreign students are not allowed to work during the school year; indeed, before a student is given a visa by an American consulate abroad, he must provide documentation of resources for personal and educational expenses during the academic term. But in the past the Immigration Service has allowed foreign students to work during the summer vacation because their funds often ran out by the time the school year ended.

Standard Repertoire Closes UNL Season

By RICHARD GRACE

The final concert of the current school year was presented Sunday afternoon by the University of Nebra ka School of Music at the University Coliseum on the UNL campus. With final exams due to begin Monday, the University Oratorio Choir and the University Symphony Orchestra brought a most successful performing arts season on the university campus to a close with a performance of "Symphony of Psalms" by Stravinsky and "Gloria" by Poulenc.

Stravinsky and Poulenc are two 20th century musical giants who have contributed some of the most outstanding compositions of this century. The two choral works performed have become standard repertoire in recent years.

Each piece has highly distinctive musical trademarks that are so typical of its respective composer as well as being entirely representative of the 20th century musical idiom. In relation to their musical counterparts of the 19th century, both composers had a superior knowledge of the orchestra and used it more prominently. The choral treatment is more rhythmically orientated and perhaps more concise in the employment of the text. The Stravinsky work did not fare well in comparison to the Poulenc, but in all fairness to correct evaluation the middle section of the work was not performed and this particular portion is a strong, powerful fugue which was sorely missed.

One cannot deny, however, that Poulenc's "Gloria" is indeed a great work with some lovely enchanting lyric qualities. excellent use of lively wordrhythms, an important soprano solo part and an interesting orchestration that captures the textual mood.

The soprano soloist, Margaret Eaves, deserves a good deal of credit for the success of this concert. Her powerful yet controlled voice was most impressive even in the ancient confines of the sports arena which, naturally, has the reputation of poor

The oratorio choir did an excellent job of managing the difficult contemporary music. The organization was expertly prepared by Earl Jenkins. The orchestra also responded well to the wishes of conductor Emanuel Wisnow, although it was somewhat distressing to observe some late arrivals in the string section during the concert. A small audience in attendance gave deserving applause to the performers.

It is difficult to evaluate the reasons for the sharp decline of interest in concerts held in the late spring months during the past few years. The combination of warm weather and an oversaturation of the musical arts on the Lincoln calander might be the answer.

If this present trend continues there ought to be serious consideration given to avoiding the scheduling of so many quality concerts during this season.

Beermann Cites Hot Local Issues

By EDWARD HOWARD Associated Press Writer

Secretary of State Allen Beermann says his official projections won't be ready until next week, but admits he will be surprised if there is not a substantial voter turnout for the May 14 primary

Beerman notes there is a hot contest for the Democratic nomination for beutenant governor, and that congressional races in the 3rd and 1st Districts have gained momentum

But aside from those there are a lot of local issues around the state that will bring the vot ers out," Beermann said

Not the least of those is fluoridation which will be on many local ballots. Localities have until Jan 1 1975 to reject fluoridation of water supplies. Communities that don't turn it down at the polis will be required by state law to fluoridate their wa

After winning his second legislative term four years ago without any opposition at all, State Sen. Roland Luedtke faces three primary election opponents in this month's featured Lincoln legislative contest.

Luedtke's 28th District seat is being sought by three challengers, including two women.

The Legislature's only woman member, State Sen. Shirley Marsh, was elected two years ago in the neighboring 29th District.

The 28th District includes most of central Lincoln, generally stretching from A to O Streets.

Wilson suggests that priorty concerns should include better management of the taxpayer's dollars, better urban representation in the Legislature and "more urban input" into the state's water resources programs

I resent having a very small group of people dividing up the water to the last drop, therely reducing the quality of life in Nebraska," he said.

As a purchaser for the University of Nebraska for 612 years, Wilson said, he was "not pleased with all I saw with regard to expenditure of the state's money" and became convinced that state spending policies should be under better control

Wilson also wants to "bring an environmental awareness" to the Legislature. He is particularly concerned that agricultural and environmental matters are considered by the same legislative committee, and that whenever there is a conflict of interest between the two interests, it is environment that always loses.

GARDEN-CHAPEL MAUSOLEUM

Why a Garden-Chapel Mausoleum?

Since first introducing to families in Nebraska and western Iowa the concept of garden mausoleum interment, many have shown a preference for the peace of mind that comes from knowing their departed loved ones will rest securely in the permanent protection of clean. dry chambers, or crypts, as if sleeping in the confines of an immaculately kept room. To fulfill the requirements of families preferring mausoleum interment as a means of honoring departed loved ones. Lincoln Memorial Park is now preparing to expand its present garden mausoleum complex and provide families with the choice that is offered by a garden-chapel mausoleum.

Is mausoleum entombment more expensive?

Taking into consideration the savings involved in not having to buy cemetery lots. interment vaults or monuments and the elimination of such other expenses as grave preparation, the cost of mausoleum entombment compares favorably with that of ground burial-particularly now, while pre-construction discounts are available.

Can I exchange property I own at Lincoln Memorial Park for mausoleum crypts?

Yes. Where present property owners wish to exchange their lots and bronze memorials for mausoleum crypts.arrangements can be made for an equitable exchange Many families have been taking advantage of this opportunity.

May a loved one interred elsewhere

be moved to the mausoleum?

Yes. It is being done, both by families whose departed loved ones have been interred at Lincoln Memorial Park and at other cemeteries.

Is provision made for perpetual care?

Yes. Perpetual Care Funds at Lincoln Memorial Park have and are being enlarged to provide for maintenance of the Garden-Chapel Mausoleum forever

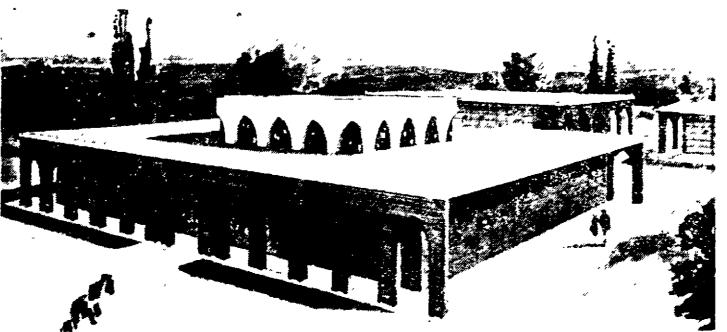

Why make plans now?

By reserving space for your family in our Garden-Chapel Mausoleum now, you can select from choice locations - take advantage of special pre-construction discounts - and, be spared the mental anguish and expense of this inevitable obligation at time of need. Monthly terms are available at no interest

The black woman sees herself and wife, attractive physically and intelligent." A Positive Self-Image

Star Staff Writer

"Wouldn't they be surprised when one day I woke out of my black ugly dream, and my real hair, which was long and blond, would take the place of the kinky mass that momma wouldn't let me straighten? My light-blue eyes were going to hypnotize them . . . '

And so, in her book "I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings," Maya Angelou describes her attitudes while growing up, black and poor, in the southern community of Stamps, Ark.

That was in the 1930's when it was easy to be ashamed of being black because of the wretched poverty that engulfed nearly all blacks and because of the forbidding white dominance which demanded subservience.

But times have changed and "Black is Beautiful," is now the slogan.

No longer are blacks docilely accepting their previous stations in life, while hoping for greater rewards in heaven.

The emphasis now is placed on positive self-images, education and helping people to help themselves. Misconceptions of black people and in particular black women, are slowly being erased. How does the black woman see herself in contemporary society? She sees herself as a successful housewife and good provider in the role of mother and wife, attractive physically and intelligent, according to Joyce Jones and Fay Zollicoffer, graduate psychology students at the University of Nebraskathe black woman is aggressive, flirty and endowed with the innate ability to raise a family without the help of a man is but a myth. Blacks, as well as those in any other race, need the unity of parents upon which to build a foundation for a secure family, the two said.

The UNL students also noted that black women fall into two catagories: the traditional role of mother and wife, or the modern feminist.

However, most black women "can't get into a sex revolution, because they are still involved with the black race and its liberation," Ms. Jones further explained.

"Black women are not being aggressive in the women's lib movement, as it presents itself now with housework and the like," agreed Mrs. Marine Scott, associated with the Malone Community Center and president of the Lincoln section, National Council of Negro Women (NCNW).

"We tend to a common agreement and not only on the local level — that the black woman has really been the mainstay of the family," Mrs. Scott continued. "It is common knowledge that white people have always looked at the black female and dealt with her to the castration of the black male.

"But, there is a visable emergence of the status of the black male, which to the outside person may seem to be the diminishing of the female role."

To the contrary, the black female's "activities have become strengthened," Mrs. Scott noted, "because she now has become involved in community

Using as an example the NCNW, Mrs. Scott said, "The national group was organized in 1935. It hit Lincoln in 1971, when we started with about 15 members. Now we have at least 70 women. We have not diminished; we have steadily grown.

"Black women today have developed an awareness of the need to become involved in such activities, to do something that affects their livelihood."

The organizations concerns include providing home ownership opportunities, centers for career advancement, recruiting and screening girls for the Job Corp through Women in Community Service (WICS), serving as a communication channel for both races and conducting a national campaign against hunger.

"We're concerned with the issues," Mrs. Scott continued, "but we have to train women into these responsibilities."

Mrs. Scott also indicated that the Church is as important to the black people as it always has been, but in a new

"It used to be that the black woman went to church to get an emotional release," she explained. "Today, we still do meet in churches to organize action for women and to get spiritual guidance to attack the problems of unemployment, poverty, etc.

"Black people still believe in the church. There is more participation in the church than anywhere else," she added. "It is part of the black culture.

"We haven't lost the spiritual part, we've just resurrected it.

MRS. SCOTT . . . and Sam Zollicoffer, work on Malone Center recreation plans. "The black minister has a captive The decision to develop such an audience on Sunday and gets to more organization was made after certain black people."

A prime example is the Rev. Leon H. Sullivan who founded the Opportunity Industrialization Center program in Philadelphia in 1964, Mrs. Scott said.

Philadelphia merchants were boycotted for three years because of their refusal to hire blacks. When the merchants agreed to change their policies, it was discovered that few blacks could qualify for the jobs because of their lack of skills, she noted. "Let's face it, there aren't that many successful blacks in the country," she stated. "We're reaching for the blacks still struggling.

"And it's the women's organizations

suggested. Fat Emily, the heroine and name of Ms. Lukas's novel about the period, suffers from the constant conflict of inner reality with outside influences. What was expected of Fat Emily, of herself and all the Fat Emilies, in those days "had nothing to do with our own desires or capacities," she said.

For instance, she pointed, "My character Emily wasn't really fat any more than I was. But we thought we were because we didn't fit the Seventeen magazine ideal of how a teenager should look."

"I suppose it was just as tough on boys," she added. "While we were all trying (or being urged) to be coy, demure facsimilies of Elizabeth Taylor, they had Marlon Brando's macho to live up to."

It's her struggle, though, that remains clear.

The pressures for becoming a non-virgin in the fifties were strong, and even stronger was the idea that it would produce a state of bliss. So, says Ms. Lukas, When things went wrong with

In 1961. Barbara Walters joined NBC-TV as a writer. In i964, she became a cast regular Post. of the network's "Today" show. Now, she has been designated a co-host of the wake-up program which CBS-TV tried to overtake its "Morning News" program.

Ms. Walters will have status equal to the person NBC appoints to replace the late Frank McGee, and she will be the only female bolding down such a spot in network news or public af-boys, when our first sexual encounter was less than ecstatic, we assumed that it was because of our own inadequacies never that the boy might be a rat or the situation impossible to begin with."

A certain kind of look, of course, was expected to unlock Most of all not Sandra Lukas, a almost any door, as well as the 33-year-old writer-housewife mysteries of sex. It didn't, and the novelist now believes that "Anybody who thinks the even the conventionally pretty 1950s were wonderful, either girls, the ones everyone envied, had to ultimately face up to the dichotomy between the dream and the reality:

"What happens to a 40-year-Take "Fat Emily," she old ex-prom queen who suddenly realizes that the high point of her life was over 20 years ago? She either goes out and joins the women's movement or jumps out a window."

Ms. Lukas regrets that her generation was so unprepared. On the other hand, she sees only marginal improvement in the situation since the fifties. She observed:

"There's more information available, but it still doesn't prepare us for the realities of sex, marriage and aging. We are still bombarded with so much beauty in movies and on TV, that if things go wrong in bed we're as likely to blame our own ugliness as Emily in 1958.

"People expect so much from their first sexual encounter that nothing can possibly measure up. Honeymoons are the same. It doesn't matter if a couple has been living together for five years, when they marry they expect violins that first night. If the earth doesn't tremble, the woman thinks, 'What did I do? Wasn't I pretty enough?'

Walters Gets Equal Billing

Ms. Quinn has since returned to her old job on the Washington

According to NBC, Ms. Walters will assume all the duties of host, conduct interviews and do special features, recently by putting glamorous chores she has handled in the newswoman Sally Quinn of past. She also frequently took Washington, D.C., out front on over for McGee when he was on vacation and filled a good deal of time when he was there.

A number of feminists had arged NBC to elevate Ms. Walters to the host spot on Today, which Advertising Age says grossed more than $15,000.-000 in 1973 and paid McGee at least $300,000 a year.

"My husband and I always try to warn couples before the honeymoon. It never helps. They don't want to be warned. But a month or so later, the woman will invariably sidle up to me and say, 'Sandra, you were right. It wasn't exactly a disaster, but, well, you know . . .

Ms. Lukas worked on "Fat Emily," her first novel, two hours each afternoon while her two small daughters napped. The process took three and onehalf months, followed by 18 months of finding an agent, then a publisher. Her husband. Christopher, a film maker, was "immensely supportive." After she got going.

"One day I just said to myself, 'Am I going to spend the rest of my life shocking people at dinner parties or am I going to be a writer?' From then on it was relatively easy," she said. Although the response to the book has been mixed, she believes "most women like it. No matter when they grew up, or at what age they lost their virginity — a focal point of the novel — they say 'that's the way it was.

different. I guess they don't want their fantasies to be challenged. They prefer to believe that it really was a breathtaking experience for their girl friends, that all those Marilyn Monroe type gasps and sighs were for real. Discovering the truth can be a blow."

In evaluating her feelings about the romantic futures of her own daughters, Ms. Lukas says, "I hope their experiences are a lot better than mine or Emily's. I hope they love as equals rather than supplicants. I hope they don't hurt themselves in an effort to 'show' me.

"Saving or not saving one's virginity isn't the point. What matters is preserving one's human dignity." And to believe in one's inner self more than one's outer self.

Ms. Lukas worries about her own ability to keep hands off, to not attempt to force her children into a group mold, or push them into doing what she as a parent thinks they should be happy. "It's so frightening to parents when their kids don't conform."

On the other hand, "Men are she said "Parents are so anxious for their girls to be popular. But, of course, girls have always found ways to manipulate their mothers.

"I used to say about a boy that my mother liked and I hated. 'I can't go out with him again, Mother,' he touched my left breast!' That always ended the argument.

It wouldn't work too well today, but I'm sure somewhere right now there's a girl getting rid of a creep by saying, 'Mother! You can't expect me to date him. He offered me a ioint!'

Prolonged Bottle Can Harm Teeth

Children who use their bottle Dr. Edward S. Mack of San after the normal weaning age are more likely to have tooth decay than their cup-drinking friends.

In fact dentists are reporting rapidly increasing numbers of one- to five-year-olds they now see in their practices with rampant tooth decay caused by extended bottle nursing, a condition often called "nursing bottle syndrome" or "nursing bottle

Allowing a child to nurse for long periods of time on milk, juices or other liquids containing sugar can cause decayed and rotten teeth, warns the American Society of Dentistry for Children (ASCD), which has launched a national campaign to educate parents.

"Nursing bottle syndrome" affects the upper front teeth especially, and is caused by putting babies to bed with their bottles to help them go to sleep or letting them suck on their bottles for hours at a time between meals, long after normal weaning time has passed, said

Francisco, president of the organization.

The sugar in the liquid which the child sucks from the bottle is the culprit, warns the society, pointing out that parents often fill the nursing bottle with sugar water or even soft drinks, as well as milk, fruit juices, and sweetened formulas.

Milk, they said, normally does not cause decay because the bacteria that cause decay cannot store milk sugar as they can refined sugar, but when milk sugar or fruit juice sugar is sucked from a bottle hour after hour and day after day the bacteria make decay-producing acid from the sugars constantly available in the mouth.

Bottle nursing at nap and bed time not only increases the production of acid on the teeth, but tends to delay weaning, the society advised, so that some children are kept on the bottle beyond two or three years of age. "If they begin to drink out of a cup or glass after the age of one year, they will not have this problem."

Ambitious Feeding Experiment Aims At Trimming Meat Costs

By DOMINICK COSTELLO Farm Editor

Bud Harrington is a man with a mission. He wants to remodel the entire cattle industry to fit the modern day needs of the homemaker who is seeking leaner beef. And he wants to do it at a lower cost.

Harrington is conducting a huge experiment to see if his theory of cutting costs in the livestock feeding industry will really work.

There are nearly 30,000 head of cattle in the experiment and a complete new feedlot with its own specially trained crew of more than 20 employees.

"Some people think we are backgrounding cattle here, but it is really just going back to feeding cattle the way our dad's did it. We use a lot more roughate, a lot less corn and, we hope, a lot less money," he explained.

Harrington has a team of buyers seeking just the right kind of cattle, light and likely to grow fast on a high silage ration. They are a mixture of English breeds and the so-called exotic breeds, carefully matched in the ears left on, 5% ground corn and 5% protein. The protein is a home-made formula developed by Harrington's staff and made at the feedlot mill.

"It just breaks the heart of some off the old sandhills cattlemen to see us mix up cattle like this, but it is working or we wouldn't do it," Harrington said.

Harrington is also feeding some straight breds (cattle of the same breed, not crossbred) on the same program for a rancher who wants performance data on his cattle.

Program Looks Good

How well is the program working so far? "We haven't completed the feeding program on any cattle yet, but we have some in the finishing stage so it won't be long now before we get the word. Based on data collected so far the program looks real good," he said.

Harrington has set up operation manuals for the various methods of feeding cattle

"What we have done is set up standard reactions to the normal problems we get, the kind of ration, treatments, feed analysis and things like that. We are trying to remove as many of the The ration is 90% silage of uncertainties from a very uncer-

explained.

Harrington's crew is made up of specialists. There are cowboys who trained in handling light weight cattle, others in working heavy cattle that are on the socalled hot ration. There are marketing specialists who only sell cattle and other specialists who only buy cattle.

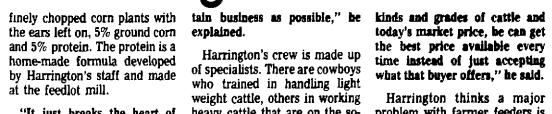

Even the grain buying is handled by a man with long experience in the grain trade.

Farmer Feeder Better Off Harrington runs one of the largest feeding operations in Nebraska but still thinks the real heart of the business will lie with the larger family farm feeder. "If this guy will use more roughage and less grain he is going to be hard to beat. He doesn't have to haul silage as far as we do. He dosen't have the labor problems we do, and he can personally supervise every step of production. I know darn well I can't do as efficient a job as the good farmer feeder except in the area of marketing,,' Harrington said.

"Marketing is where he falls down. He just waits for the buyer to come in and take the cattle out. If the farmer feeder will keep himself informed on problem with farmer feeders is that they tend to hold cattle too long, "Get rid of them when they are ready. Holding them for a better market is an expensive proposition. If you can't get a good bid, you might have to take them to Omaha, but don't sit on them too long," he said.

Drove Him Crazy Another advantage the smaller feeder has is that he isn't bothered by phone calls. "I used to have a phone in the car. I took it out. They nearly drove me crazy with that thing," he said.

Hauling manure is another major problem on a huge operation. "We will give manure to any farmer who wants to haul it away. We buy very little fertilizer for our cropground. They could save quite a bit if they will just come after the manure," he

If Harrington's experiment proves successful, it will mean that more beef will be produced in Nebraska. "We already know we can produce more beef on an acre of ground. If it works, we will be able to out-compete with the Texas feeder who must use grain, and it will mean lowercost meat for the housewife. We are pretty sure it will work, or we wouldn't have made this kind of investment," he said.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DONINICK COSTELLO Farm Editor

I spent more than a week driving through the wheat and cattle country in the western half of Nebraska gathering impressions of the changes and at-'titudes in rural Nebraska.

Generally, farmers are expressing a sort of concerned optimism about the future of the food production industry.

Older farmers are concerned about the ability of the younger farmers in the cattle business. "The kids are getting hurt real bad because they have high interest rates and are facing real losses. Most are not making said. enough to pay the interest on the money they have borrowed if -they are in the livestock business, and cattle feeders are being destroyed economically," a local banker told me.

A young ranch wife showed off the new color television and dis--hwasher in her home, commenting that if cattle prices had just stayed up a little longer, they might have been able to do something about the antiquated plumbing in their 1908 home.

A hog producer explained he was operating on his own money instead of borrowing to expand. -"If I stay out of the borrowing of money. I can operate at a lower out-of-pocket cost. Maybe I can survive the period of lower prices better than if I had

Beefland Plant To Seek Order Against Strike

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) -Management of the Beefland International plant will seek a permanent injunction against striking District 271 of the meat cutters May 16, a spokesman District Judge R. Kent Martin of Council Bluffs has granted a temporary restraining order against the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America.

The union called a strike Friday at the plant. Judge Martin ordered that strikers cease assembling in a driveway and an area immediately adjacent to the main plant.

Mike Amoura, assistant president for personnel and labor relations, said the strikers had been harassing persons entering the plant.

Currently, 650 persons are on strike. The union has charged that the company illegally launched a campaign to end its representation at the plant and replace it with a companycontrolled umon.

Frank West of Omaha, board chairman and president of American Beef Packers of Omaha, which operates Beefland, denied the charges and said the plant will remain

Time production sale brought $40,870. The sale, held at the Phipps ranch, brought an average of $681. Top price of $1,250 was paid by Harold Kenner and Son of Marsland for a Lyle R. Phipps bull, EO Crusty 108. Howard Wright of Mullen paid $1,200 for another Phipps animal, EOEH Domino 63.

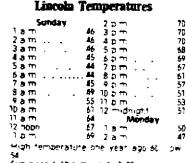

Eastern Firm Cancels Aurora Site

Aurora — An undisclosed eastern sportswear manufacturer that announced plans for location of a plant in Aurora in February has apparently withdrawn these plans. In a letter received by the Aurora Development Corporation, the firm explained it would not be feasible for the company to establish the size apparel manufacturing faculty they had planned in Aurora. However, the eastern firm said Aurora might be considered for a smaller specialty plant

Community Sign Added To Exeter Scene

Exeter - A community activities sign, constructed by agriculture students at Exeter High School, has been erected on the town's main street at the south edge of the business district. Funds for the sign were made possible by the Exeter Community Improvement Council. The sign will list all major activities of the community.

President Nixon maintained a 31% positive job rating on his performance in the White House in a Harris Survey conducted between April 15 and 20 He thus held onto the five-point gain he had previously registered from his all-time low of 26% early in

Nixon's rise has been almost exclusively based on rising public confidence in his foreign policy, and some easing of criticism of him over the energy

At the same time, the President appeared to be in deeper trouble than ever in his handling of the impending impeachment proceedings and in public belief about his involvement in Watergate related matters The survey was taken, however, before the President's televised announcement that he was turning over edited transcripts of the Watergate tapes to the House Judiciary Committee

By 75-17'r, the public gave Nixon negative marks on "the way he is cooperating with impeachment proceedings" compared with a 71-21' e negative standing in March On his handling of the whole Watergate episode, President Nixon now received a 84-12% negative rating, compared with 80-16 per cent in March.

Significantly, personal confidence in Nixon hit an all-time low No more than 13% of a national cross section of 1,503 adults said they believed the President "personally inspires confidence in the White House." compared with 48% who felt that way back in early 1973.

Periodically, the Harris Survey has asked samplings of the public:

"How would you rate the President on inspiring confidence personally in the White House — excellent pretty good. only fair or poor?

With the exception of relations with our allies in Europe, Nixon comes up with uniformly positive ratings on foreign policy. Since February, his standing on "working for peace" has risen from 63% to 66%, on handling relations with Russia up from 52% to 59%, handling relations with China up from 50% to 54%, and on handling the Middle East crisis up from 43%

On his handling of the energy shortage, Nixon was rated 74somewhat better than the 78-17% negative standing recorded for him during the height of the gasoline crunch.

When it is all added up, the over-all standing of Nixon remained what it was in late March - 31% positive. Periodically, cross sections of the public have been asked:

Positive Negative Sure Late March Early March

The precipitous drop in Nixon's over-all standing took place last October at the conclusion of the Watergate hearings. While he has come back from his all-time low of 26% positive, nonetheless the American people still were giving him no etter than 2-to-1 negative marks on his conduct of office just before he began his counterattack for public support on the impeachment issue.

Sherman Field In Bad Shape

Sherman Field - where Nebraska Wesleyan, the Lincoln high schools and Lincoln Legion teams play - has been allowed to deteriorate into a very sad shape.

The grass isn't kept short enough on both the infield and outfield, there are mounds and valleys on the dirt portion of the infield instead of being level and the pitching mound is anything but regulation height.

A lot of sandlot baseball diamonds are in better shape. Looking across the infield at Sherman Field at field level, it appears like an ocean with waves.

The new fieldhouse for Nebraska Wesleyan will emphasis "individual and intramural" participation according to college president Dr. Vance Rogers.

There will be no spectator seating in building that will feature a Tartan floor and be built just West of Magee

Construction is scheduled to start in January with completion set for the following August. The only varsity sports that could end up being held in the fieldhouse would be indoor track and tennis.

There won't be any classrooms or offices in the building, but three new locker rooms are scheduled to be

Dr. Milt Evans, the tennis coach at NWU, should be elated over the building. Now his teams can work out early in the season and during adverse weather during the

Evans has been responsible for building the tennis program for the Plainsmen and the new fieldhouse should help him more in the future.

Butts' Comeback Looking Good

There were a few skeptics when the story came out that former Grand Island standout Randy Butts was attempting a comeback at Kearney State after dropping out of Nebraska.

Butts, a football and hurdle great, went out for spring football at Kearney State since he wasn't eligible for

The former Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star high school athlete of the year was the leading rusher in the Antelopes' final scrimmage with 72 yards in 15 carries.

Former Grand Island Northwest standout Dave Burke rushed for 61 yards in 14 carries in the same scrimmage and another Sunday Journal and Star high school athlete of the year, Tom Kropp, was one of the game's leading tacklers.

Kropp was moved from fullback to linebacker, which shouldn't hurt Kearney State's offense too much with Butts and Burke in the same backfield.

The Antelopes planned on using Kropp on both offense and defense last year, but he injured a knee early in the season to wipe out those plans.

Crete High basketball standout Loren Weiderspan has apparently chosen Kearney State over Doane for playing his college ball.

Bob Erickson, Doane's basketball coach and Al Papik, Doane's former athletic director and football and track coach, are now related since Erickson's daughter and Papik's son married.

Since Erickson is 6-3 with a full head of hair and Papik is quite a bit shorter and bald, one wag suggested that Erickson's grandsons will be short and bald, which isn't that good for a basketball coach.

Prominently displayed high on the top of

Memorial Stadium is a legend chisled into a concrete block. Not the victory but the action not the goal but the game in the deed the glory

That's the key - the deed. The glory will come later sure as God made little green apples. Especially with the team effort and desire the Nebraska Cornhuskers displayed in their annual spring Red-White game Saturday.

Some of the positions on the Big Red team are sewn up. But others are not and one is the I-back. When two outstanding players are forced to split playing time at one position you'd think the rivalry would result in jealousies. But that's not the case with Nebraska's tandem I-back Jeff Moran and John

Both backs got the call for the Reds in the spring came with O Leary gaining 56 yards on nine carries and Moran 20 on four plus nine more on a pass play from Dave Humm. But the yardage doesn't make a bit of difference to the semor Moran

"It's great playing the tandem way." Moran said enthusiastically "This way none of us get tired and it lessens the injury possibility

I don't think one I-back for a whole game is very advantageous for either the team or the player. O'Lears said. "That I-back is going to take a real beating if he has to play the whole game. This way we're both fresh and can play a lot better ball Both backs, however, have their favorite plays

Moran likes to take pitchouts and sweep the ends while O'Leary well. O'Leary's favorite play is whenever he gets his hands on the ball I like to go wide." Moran said definitely. "I like to make that turn. But I can t make that turn if the line isn't doing it's job. And this year that line has been fantastic. We can run anyplace. "You see," he said warming to his task, "It's a team game. And that's what we are. Nobody is hogging the glory and it doesn't really make any difference who scores as long as somebody does. We're working as a unit."

That line is fantastic O'Lears said "We're working as a team now. I in a little disappointed in my

Wayne Nets Gals' Crown

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - After winning two games earlier in the day, pitcher Tana Taylor tired in the third as her University of Nebraska at Omaha team lost to Wayne 11-1 for the championship of the Women's State College softball tournament Sun-

Tana hurled UNO to an 8-2 elimination win over John F. Kennedy Sunday morning, then stopped undefeated Wayne 12-3 in the second contest of the day. Wayne got to her for five runs in three innings and went on to win its second title in three years and will represent Nebraska in the May 16-19 Women's Softball College World Series here.

Tulsa Drops Omaha, 6-2

TULSA, Okla. (AP)-Righthander Ray Bare scattered eight hits as Tulsa defeated Omaha, 6-2, Sunday afternoon for its 11th straight American Association victory.

The win set an Oiler record, breaking the previous mark of 10 wins in a row set by Warren Spahn's 1968 Pacific Coast League champions. Tulsa struck for three runs in the fourth after as losing pitcher Paul Peltz walked the bases full. Ed Kurpiel providing what proved to be the winning blow, a two-run double.

Terry Richards successfully began his defense of his superstock point title as racing began at Midwest Speedway Sunday

Richards, who defeated Lincoln's Jay Stearns by only four points for last year's title. emerged the victor in the 25-lap main event after front-runner Dick Jensen blew a tire

Jensen, of Aurora, started in the first row, with Richards and grabbed the lead.

For 18 laps Jensen, Richards of David City, Sterns, and Lincoln's Joe Wade ran 1-2-3-4 in a close battle, with no driver able to improve his position

But then Jensen blew his tire allowing Richards to take a lead he never relinquished, although Stearns and Wade continued to press him until the finish.

Aurora's Kent Tucker, who started far back in the pack. closed strongly for fourth, and had he not had problems getting through traffic early in the race, he might have finished higher

Earlier in the evening. Terry Nickles of Lincoln won the hobby stock event, a 12-lap affair. Richards also won the super

Omaha, Neb. (AP) - The con- slowness with progress." quest of cancer may be hundreds of years away, according to Dr. Claude E. Welch, president of the American College of

Dr. Welch, a cancer specialist, predicted victory over cancer on the order of the conquest of polio or tuberculosis won't be achieved until the year 3000.

He said that, "If we do it by then I would be happy. I know the public is going to be disappointed when I say that. But we can pour money into research, and there still will be a great

Mid-America: Milk Prices Unchanged

Omaha, Neb. (AP) - A spokesman for Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., said milk prices paid to Nebraska and western lowa farmers will remain unchanged under a new standardized price system.

Robert Koehler of Omaha, manager of marketing, said the new system will go into effect in 20 states on Aug. 1.

Koehler said prices in the Nebraska-Western Iowa milk marketing order have been based on the Minnesota-Wisconsin price for years.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture said 39 milk marketing areas are affected by the method which gears producer prices to those paid by processing plants in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Although there has been some shuffling of dairy products made from the three classes of milk sold, Koehler said that when averaged out it "wouldn't make a nickel's worth of difference.'

U.N. Official To Address Lincoln Group

Abdulrahim Abby Farah, assistant secretary general of the United Nations for political affairs, will address the Annual Presidents Dinner Monday of the United Nations Association of Lincoln.

Following a morning press conference, Farah, a citizen of Somalia, will meet with Gov. J. James Exon at the State Capitol and will tour the building and other attractions in the city.

A 6 p.m. reception for the U.N. official will be held at the Nebraska Center on East Campus, followed by the dinner in the Omaha Room at 6:30.

The evening dinner meeting is open to the public, and non-UNA members may inquire for reservations and tickets by calling Glenn Feather, president; or Don Miller, vice president.

Saturday's Cryptoquote: THE FIRST LESSON IN THE ART OF SELF-DEFENSE IS TO KEEP YOUR GLASSES ON .-AUTHOR UNKNOWN

(@1974 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. OKing Features Syndicate, Inc., 1974. World rights reserved.
